FROM BALLOTS TO BOMBS

THE INSIDE STORY OF THE NATIONAL FRONT'S POLITICAL SOLDIERS

FROM BALLOTS TO BOMBS THE INSIDE STORY OF THE NATIONAL FRONT'S POLITICAL SOLDIERS

THE RISE OF THE POLITICAL SOLDIERS

Sequence of events

1966	Formation of the National Front.
1972	John Tyndall becomes NF chairman.
1974	Tyndall ousted by Strasserites.
1975	Power struggle in the NF between pro-Hitler nazis and the Strasserites. Tyndall wins and regains the leadership. The Strasserites leave and form the shortlived National Party.
1979	Thatcher becomes Prime Minister. Collapse of NF vote and membership. Tyndall departs and forms New National Front.
	International right changes course towards terrorism. Third positionists national revolutionaries and Strasserites dominate the new wave.
1980	Terrorist bombing campaign in Europe. Bologna railway station massacre. Bombs in Paris and Munich.
1981	Italian exiles led by Roberto Fiore arrive in Britain and target NF for takeover.
	Tyndall re-forms British National Party.
	Demise of British Movement.
1982	Rising magazine used as vehicle for Italian and NF dissidents' campaign. A secret cadre training programme begins.
1983	Terror campaign by The Order in the USA.
•	Martin Webster expelled from the NF in a massive purge of the old guard. The new leadership is a combination of Strasserites and national revolutionaries.
1986	Nazi godfather Colin Jordan publishes a blueprint for the future of the British far right.
	Second purge in the NF leaves the smaller of the two factions in legal control. It becomes known as the political soldier wing. The more moderate Strasserites form what has become known as the Flag group of the NF.
1988	The political soldiers openly align themselves with Gaddafi and Khomeini and black and white US extremist groups. They give public backing to Welsh bombers.

Further purge after NF's terror connections are revealed on television.

1989

Introduction

In the spring of 1988 Channel 4 Television took the decision to make a programme about the National Front's political soldier wing. It would be the first television programme made purely about the National Front in ten years. It would also coincide with the NF's 21st birthday.

A Searchlight journalist was to be a producer for the programme and through him the programme gained access to our extensive files on the far right. We also agreed that, under very stringent conditions, we would make available information coming from our own people operating under deep cover inside the NF.

Between the spring and 5th October 1988, when the programme was eventually transmitted as the first in a new series of Dispatches, with the title "Disciples of Chaos", we took the opportunity of talking to dozens of current members of both wings of the NF and many former members who had left of their own accord or had been purged in one of the several political blood lettings that had taken place between 1983 and late 1988. All the evidence pointed to the fact that our own analysis of what was taking place on the British far right was as near as damn it correct.

The sum total of our research was to reveal an ever increasing move away from any ideas of gaining power via the ballot box to a position that appeared to draw its strength from a combination of political schools of thought. These ranged from something known as national bolshevism, which appeared for a short time in Germany in the years between the end of the First World War and the founding of the National Socialist German Workers' Party (Nazi party), through strains of Italian fascism promoted by a quasi philosopher, Julius Evola, to the so-called 'third position' politics whose advocates claim to support neither capitalism nor communism. Among the ranks of the latter are not only Third World politicians like the Ayatollah Khomeini of Iran and Colonel Gaddafi of Libya, but also the most violent of the new wave young nazi groups from America, Italy, Spain, Germany and now Britain.

Arthur Keith Chesterton, first chairman of the National Front in 1967.

Despite the National Front's protestations that it is in no way nazi or fascist, every academic or investigative look at it reveals that at heart this is exactly what it is.

To set the scene for what has happened in the last six years, one has to look at least briefly at the history of the National Front. Formed in the winter of 1966/67, the Front was an amalgamation of several apparently diverse organisations. The two largest were the original British National Party, essentially a national socialist organisation, and the League of Empire Loyalists, which liked to portray itself as ultra-Tory but was in fact a well-financed coterie of anti-semitic cranks led by A.K. Chesterton. This man, who had been Oswald Mosley's political secretary in the 1930s, was soon to become the Front's first boss. Hanging onto the coat tails was the Racial Preservation Society, again a wellfinanced and secretive group that contained both nazis and extremist conservatives. Finally some months later they were joined by the 132 members of John Tyndall's openly Hitler worshipping Greater Britain Movement, a splinter from Colin Jordan's National Socialist Movement, which was later to become the British Movement.

The Front, which had started out with a membership of around 4,000, grew to over 17,500 members by 1973, drawing its increasing support at the ballot box mainly from dissatisfied Labour voters in inner city areas, and its membership from dissident Conservatives who found themselves at odds with Edward Heath's soft approach over key issues like Rhodesia, law and order and, above all, immigration. Heath's sacking of Enoch Powell in 1968 had totally alienated the Conservative Prime Minister from the party's racist right wing.

Despite the small number of Tyndall's followers, by 1974 they were able to seize total control of the NF by combining with the followers of a tradition more closely associated with the brownshirts in pre-nazi Germany, named after their two mentors, the Strasser brothers. Within a year however ideological differences resulted in a power struggle developing between these two groups. Each group held control of the NF for short periods, until in the mid 1970s a Strasserite group broke away to form the National Party. Although this party was short-lived, it drew to it the more thoughtful younger elements of the movement, such as Dave McCalden, Richard Lawson, Paul Kingsley and Steve Brady.

The combination of these splits inside the movement and the enormous outside pressure stemming from the election, on a radical right wing programme, of Margaret Thatcher to the leadership of the Conservative Party led to the almost total demise of the NF at the ballot box and the mass desertion from its ranks, back into the Tory Party, of Conservatives who had defected to the Front eight years earlier.

In 1979 Tyndall himself left what he saw as a sinking ship and formed first the New National Front and later a new British National Party, which he continues to lead in führer like style to the present day, with a membership of around 800.

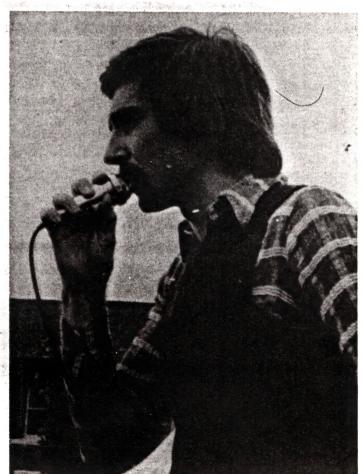

In 1979 and 1980 two international gatherings of nazis took place in New Orleans and Bruges in Belgium. It was clear from leaks emanating from these gatherings that the international far right were looking for new ways to move forward, as many of their old clothes had been stolen by the new radical conservatives in both the United States and Western Europe including Britain.

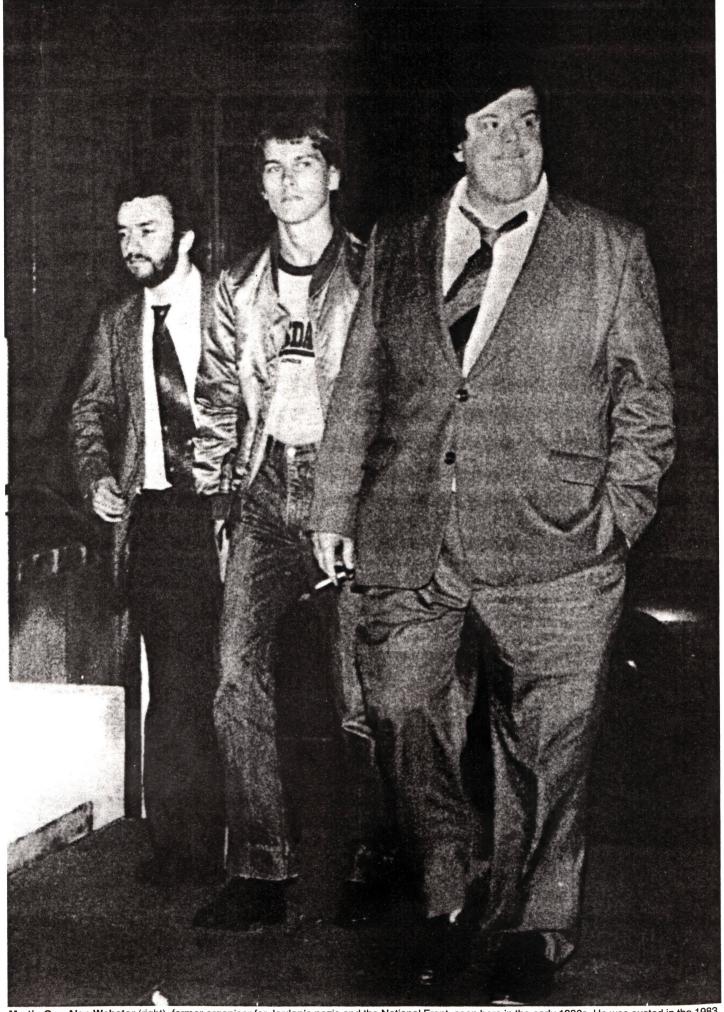

It soon became very clear that the path they had decided

ABOVE: John Hutchyns Tyndall (right), former chairman of the National Front and now leader of the British National Party; John Colin Campbell Jordan (left), the godfather of Britain's post-war nazi movements. RIGHT: David McCalden, former youth officer of the National Front, now resident in the USA and one of the key third positionists and historical revisionists. BELOW: Steven John Brady (left), Strasserite and long-time contact of Ulster Protestant paramilitary groups.

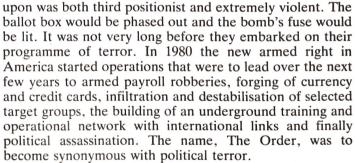

Martin Guy Alan Webster (right), former organiser for Jordan's nazis and the National Front, seen here in the early 1980s. He was ousted in the 1983 coup. Patrick Harrington (centre) in the shadow of his controller. Today he is one of the NF political soldier chiefs.

ABOVE: Derek Holland playing political soldiers in Hampshire. Now he is one of the chiefs of the political soldier wing and their key Middle East contact man. Below: Nick Griffin, one of the chiefs of the NF political soldier wing, seen here in the days before the NF split.

In Germany, France and Italy a wave of both selected and indiscriminate bombings took place. In Italy the bombings, which took more than 100 lives, were carried out by members of the Armed Revolutionary Nuclei (NAR), a third positionist, cell structured, terror group. The suspicions at the time that they were connected with the notorious P2 freemasons' lodge and right wing elements within state security have now been confirmed by convictions in the Italian courts of elements of all three groups for the Bologna bombing of August 1980.

A series of robberies to finance the new movements is common in most countries where they have been active. In countries where such activities were more difficult the groups have benefited from crimes committed elsewhere, such as the multi-million pound bank vault robbery in Spain in the early 1980s.

The other pattern that was to emerge during the 1980s was the restructuring of the far right in several key countries, allowing the movements to target the mid 1990s and onwards for larger scale and more public activity. To enable this to happen there had to be at least a tacit agreement between the most active of the groups who subscribed in one form or another to fascist politics to act in unison. It also meant that one group would have to be selected as the key organisation for training, international liaison and setting at least the movement's private agenda. if not its public one.

ABOVE: Paul Kingsley, Strasserite and organiser of the British Friends of Ulster. Below: Andrew Brons, former NF chairman and now a senior officer of the NF Flag Group.

In 1980 the British far right was in the doldrums. The Front's membership was down to under 4,000, British Movement was very soon to vanish from the scene and Tyndall's organisation was under 2,000 strong. The NF was being run on a day to day basis by nazi Martin Webster and chaired by Andrew Brons, a lecturer based close to Colin Jordan's home in Yorkshire. Within the organisation were a number of very young but capable fresh faces, Nick Griffin, still a student at Cambridge University, Derek Holland, studying history at a red brick university, Patrick Harrington, a street activist later to spring to fame as a philosophy student at North London Polytechnic, Ian Anderson who had recently left Oxford University, and Joe Pearce, the leader of the Young National Front and about the only genuine working class leader in the organisation.

Until the early 1980s Martin Webster had been able to keep a tight rein on the activities of these youngsters, strongly disapproving of any ideas or actions that might endanger his cushy niche at NF headquarters.

enemies do beyond this? The ancient Celts inscribed this strength into a proverb: "Fight for your country and accept death if necessary: because death is a victory and a liberation for the soul. We fight for the England of William Byrd and Thomas Tallis; for the wild beauty of Cornwall and the serenity of the Lake District.

RIGHT: Extracts from European Right and its successor Rising, the original English publication of the political soldiers, run by Derek Holland, alias Richard Murphy, and Roberto Fiore. ABOVE: The Political Soldier, credo of the new style NF, written by Derek Holland.

Six weeks before the Bologna bombing nazi activists in Britain had been asked to provide 'safe housing' for some Italian comrades who would be arriving soon. The placing of these Italians was left in the hands of Steve Brady, at that time the international officer for the League of St George. This very small but well financed and fanatical hardline nazi organisation was made up mainly of former officials of Mosley's party and members of the highly secretive nazi intelligence and paramilitary group, Column 88.

The new arrivals from Italy were very keen to find a larger organisation to which they could attach themselves and, if need be, subvert for the needs of the new international policy of restructuring the movement. It soon became abundantly clear to them that the National Front was the vehicle for this end. The result was that over the next two years, until 1983, the Front was run by two parallel leaderships. One was the elected Webster and Brons official leadership; the other was a combination of the Italian exiles, led by a young man called Roberto Fiore, with Griffin,

THIS PAPER IS DEDICATED TO NANH! DE ANGELIS AND FRANCESCO MANGIAMELI, REVOLUTIONARY FIGHTERS DEAD ON THE HONOUR'S FRONT, AND TO LUCA NAZARENO DE ANGELIS, BORN IN PRISON, SYMBOL OF OUR FUTURE.

FREDA: a martyr for our cause.

One of the finest contemporary political theorists of the National Revolutionary struggle in Europe is an Italian, Giorgio Freda. The nature of his personality and manner, the inspirational value of his ideas, and the extent of his sacrifice for our Cause, have contrived to make him something of a beacon for Italian Nationalists. The rise of Freda to political prominence in his country has been closely related to his experiences in the Italian Courts.

During the 1960's, he established his reputation in the outcome of the control of was acquitted. Towever, almost infinedately a sind enraged" media went into action: "Everyone he is guilty - he must pay - the people demand ju The result: 15 years imprisonment for being a mof a "subversive association" - the only member and of the Christian Crusader who defended our European culture from the onslaughts of an alien menace.

The struggle which engages us is a total struggle, the forces of Life confronted by the agents of Death. No quarter may be given; no quarter will be given. In the confusion and anguish of a daily battle that constantly remain, we live, our Ideal lives. Draw solace then and return refreshed to the battlefield, for no Cause is more noble and more worthy than ours. You, the National Revolutionaries, are the Legionaries that stand between Death and the Reawakening.

1) To give paid work to some militant. But the militant's mind should be ready also to go without wages in difficult periods.

2) To create a point of reference for people outside the move-

3) To answer by our good example the smears against us. 4) To penetrate the childrens' families with meetings and other

Holland and Pearce. Brons was eventually seduced by this

A magazine called Rising, which was jointly controlled by Fiore and Strasserites Paul Matthews and Derek Holland, using the alias Richard Murphy, was the vehicle for putting forward their ideas. Shortly afterwards Holland produced a short but horrific booklet, The Political Soldier, which was to become their credo. The finance for this operation came from the coffers of the Italian exiles who had now been joined in London by double murderer Luciano Petrone, leader of the gang who had carried out the Spanish bank vault robbery.

In parallel with their negotiation with the Italians, Joe Pearce and Derek Holland had been meeting representatives of Gaddafi's regime through the Libyan People's Bureau in London. Holland also wrote a broadsheet called Victory to Palestine, which had been funded by an Iraqi supporter of the Iranian Islamic fundamentalist regime. But the increasingly cosy situation with the Libyans came to an abrupt, but temporary, halt after one of them murdered WPC Yvonne Fletcher outside the People's Bureau offices in London.

ABOVE: Ian Anderson seen on an anti-Irish demonstration ten years ago. Now he is chairman of the NF Flag group. Below: Police picture of the convicted Italian third position terrorist, Roberto Fiore, one of the key people in the pro-Libyan takeover of the NF and an original political soldier. He now lives in London.

In 1983 Webster was swept from power in a Saturday afternoon coup. There immediately followed a massive purge of the organisation. A definite policy of reducing the ranks to a manageable size to accommodate new security and political programmes got underway. In the next twelve months the membership was run down to just under 1,000, before a recruitment programme was instituted that was based on the new leadership choosing potential members rather than anyone being able to join, as in the past. The training of a cadre corp, i.e. an elite leadership, for the NF was already well underway two years before they seized power.

In 1986 the godfather of the British far right, Colin Jordan, wrote an in-depth article outlining his view of the future of the British far right. To publish it he chose the journal of the League of St George, National Review, so effectively placing himself above the organisations to which he was addressing his ideas.

Joe Pearce, twice jailed editor of Bulldog and key working class Strasserite pictured here in the early 1980s before the second NF split. Now he is with the Flag group.

In simple terms he suggested a far right comprising three main units. The first two of these would be a fascist group that could play its games on the edge of the ultra-right of the Conservative Party, and a mainstream old-style National Front that could hold public demonstrations, stand for election and bait blacks and Jews in the traditional fascist manner. The third group would be the movement's elite where its cadres would be trained, where real decisions would be taken and where those prepared to sacrifice their lives to their ideology would be found. It was quite clear that he was writing about people breaking the law, because he said that part of the sacrifice would mean imprisonment or years of exile for some.

In the months that followed the Jordan plan was rapidly put into operation. A second purge of the National Front and the defections of former officers of the Conservative Party student organisation, FCS, to Tyndall's British National Party clearly reflected the movement's acceptance week before any announcement was sent to the NF membership concerning the 'coup against me on 10th December!

Nicola Vincenzio Crane, enforcer for the far right's music and youth scene. He has a long list of serious convictions for anti-black and anti-police violence.

BELOW: Martin Webster's internal NF letter blows the whistle on dealings with the Libyans by Pearce, Holland and others, at the time of the murder of WPC Yvonne Fletcher. BOTTOM: Nazi godfather Colin Jordan's blueprint for the nazi movement into the next century, published in the League of St George publication National Review in 1986.

Why did Anderson's edict mention "N. Africans"? He knows I know of "business" between Holland, on behalf of RISING, and Libyan Embassy officials. Last week's siege makes this a rather delicate matter for an 'expert' on Strategy and Non-Violence to explain! How did Holland use the money? None if it came the NF's way! A ·blessing in disguise, in view of recent events!

In marticular, about Evols in works will also increasing infl

We will be hold That will then Some of these w policies, basic at a more advan be possible for when it would be a date which is

We are sorry ab disrupted for s NS Several good pe Wartin Webster his anti-Europe bas no control.

From that begin has lost. He has longer editor c younger element and the the ide to do, but he h

We will be in to hearing from

Your sincerely

(7954

Gary. (One of t

10p

PARTY TIME HAS ENDED The Case for Politics beyond the Party by Colin Jordan

WE live in the twilight days of a doomed age. Enveloping us is a sick society, condemned to death in the comic cycle of ransformation by its inherent healthy to overcome its strains and stresser, an old order now chibiting a myriad maintestations of ransformation by its inherent healthy to overcome its strains and stresser, and order now chibiting a myriad maintestation of a davancing diameter price of the contract of the cont

These conditions specify a life and death struggle for those dedicated to the survival and advancement of Higher Man through a New Order of Aryandom. In such a struggle the presentation of the order of the such as a searching appraisal of subjected to an analysis of cost-effectiveness, and retained or subjected to an analysis of cost-effectiveness, and retained or operated accordingly. Against that back-cloth, this article is concerned to show that the day of the political party is over, the appeal to the masses with leaflests at large, its marches round and round the houses, and all the rest of fit routine designed to woo and win the majority wor of the population at an election

The political party, whatever its content, and even where nominally anti-democratic, is the organizational product of himses society called "Democracy", meaning a society which proports to respond to and provide for the Common Man. It was preceded by the overt and avowed rule of minorities, and contentionary to no less subject to minorities than any other experienced or conjectured society, its only distinction in threspect being that of the modes operated of its minorities. It is respect their properties of the modes o ha mass acciety, consequent on the increase in communication among the propose in large, and the increase in the uniformity of their lives, both remaining from the Industrial Revolution, and this long before the activent of the most moders and most powerful means of moviding the musics of the masses: television. With television today the ruling misorities of Democracy have an instrument of medic control in the centre of virtually every looms in the land, ensuring that millions upon millions of beguind boots of the cathodor-ry tube think the "democratic" opaid which consent of the relevision lost today decided as the told result of the ballot does industrially and then come to the control of the control of the relevision lost today decided as the told result of the ballot does incorrors.

DEMOCRACY'S CONTROL BOX

The party game at thes firmly under the power of the enemy of national and management and indisplance in it by those necluded from television, along with the rest of the mass media, is a waser of time. Even Hilder — who cannot power just before his oppositions gained this weapon— could not occur to power just before his oppositions gained this weapon— could not occur to prove the party of the country of the

Created for and concerned with the masses. the Nationalis or Nationalis consists party metaphy becomes reported and corrupted by the exactions of the innohement. In the debauxe pursus of numbers as the measure of the innohements into weard of carbonal severnly which patrasites weakness. Frintly, in or desire to attract the Common Man in quantity, in the desire to attract the Common Man in quantity, in order to the carbonal severnly which patrasites weakness. Frintly, in or desire to attract the Common Man in quantity, in order than the patrasites of the carbonal control of the things of the carbonal control carbonal control cont tectomorphics, with order than the state of the state of ABOVE: Luciano Petrone, the third positionist bank robber and killer of two Italian policemen. He was deported from Britain and is now serving a life sentence. Below: Ian Stuart Donaldson, leader of the longest running racist band "Skrewdriver", now runs the "Blood and Honour" set up after falling out with the political soldiers. He has been in jail for racist violence.

known as the Flag Group, after their newspaper.

Whatever the public and general membership of the organisations were being told about the reasons for the splits and purges, there was a handful of officers who knew the real truth.

The only variation to the Jordan plan was the attempted creation of a youth movement based on violence on the football terraces and youth culture set around 'Oi music' and the skinhead cult. It was intended that this body would scoop up the aging skins who had once supported British Movement in large numbers, the notorious football gangs like the Chelsea headhunters and anybody else who could be cannon fodder for inner city street battles. The three people envisaged to lead this operation were Nicky Crane, former British Movement leader guard member; Ian Stuart Donaldson, whose group Skrewdriver is the best known of the nazi bands; and the former Young National Front leader, Joe Pearce. This scheme went awry because all three of them were sent to prison for various offences over a period of two years.

It was 1988 that was to see the most drastic changes in policy by what was now known as the political soldier wing of the NF, controlled by Nick Griffin, Derek Holland and Patrick Harrington. First they were to drop their public racism and replace it with a mish mash of ideas that they hoped would ingratiate them to black ultra nationalists in the United States, like Rev Louis Farrakhan, who preaches a form of apartheid for black people, allows US nazis to attend his rallies and goes in for a virulent form of public antisemitism. Secondly they looked for a new approach in Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic, which included a unilateral declaration of independence (UDI) for Ulster and attempts to recruit dissident members of the Provisional IRA, a complete break from the total support they had offered in the past to the Protestant Loyalist cause.

Thirdly they totally abandoned the ballot box in favour of a form of government which they claim to be akin to that of Gaddafi's regime in Libya. All of this has been crowned by their public refusal to denounce the IRA as terrorists for their attack on civilian targets, the total commitment to the Italian terrorists, who are still living in Britain although sentenced in Italy in absentia, and finally their support for the people behind the bombing campaign that spread from Wales into England at the end of 1988.

Almost every political decision made by the chiefs of the political soldier wing of the NF has proved to be badly judged. In Northern Ireland they fell in with the policy of the late UDA leader, John McMichael, of UDI for Ulster, only to see him change his mind when he realised it was unworkable, leaving them holding the baby. In their totally uncritical support for the Libyan regime they have time and time again pressed their view that this is the way forward in terms of governmental style for Britain, only to find that of late the Colonel himself is reassessing his style of government. Finally their move from open support for the ideas of Julius Evola, a supporter of German national socialism rather than Italian fascism, to adherence to the brownshirt politics of the Strassers has in turn been shed for something more obscure and sinister.

We think the best way for the reader to get an understanding of what is going on inside the political soldier wing of the National Front is to read their own internal documents and jottings and to listen to the words of their own members and former members. We have taken three people to illustrate this. Each of them is a composite of a number of people, but their words are genuine. Obviously as anti-fascists and anti-racists we do not subscribe to what they have to say, but this is the truth of the move away from the ballot box to the bomb by Britain's key nazi group.

TRANSCRIPT FROM SECTION OF CONVERSATION WITH PATRICK HARRINGTON 16.8.81 Harrington: ... Brixton ... A few years ago there was a riot there... We controlled the situation ... you understand what I mean? Oh, so if you honestly think the police are there to protect Desai: us, right ... Harrington: They are ! Look, if the police weren't there... What do you mean? When you fire bomb? That's why they need to protect us ... is that what you mean? Harrington: Yes. That's what I'm saying ... you're protected by the police. The police are your allies. So you'd do more fire bombing and things like that if it wasn't for the police? Harrington: Yes! You would? Corr: Harrington: Yes! Corr: And you've done that have you? Harrington: No, but I would do if the police (rest of sentence obscured). $\forall$ LATER Desai: what about that lady in the bookshop, the one over there, right. You agree with this lady being done over?

ABOVE: Part of the transcript of a tape recording of Patrick Harrington in which he supports violence. It was made in the early 1980s. Below: Martin Webster's internal appeal to the NF after the 1983 coup. It mentions that Harrington kept him in the picture about the collaboration between the Italian exiles and Holland and co.

Harrington: That's what happens in revolutions - people get hurt. If you're a revolutionary do you expect to come to power without violence?

1 0m 5 tale

I suppose I have one of the better overviews of what has happened to the NF. I am now in my early 60s and joined the Front in 1971. I suppose I am what you would have called in those days a working class Tory. Truth be it, I was rather more lower middle class, had my own small business and lost it when the area I lived in was redeveloped for council housing. I have never liked black people and, although I did not really know any, I did not have much time for Jews either.

When I joined the NF it was growing by leaps and bounds and despite people calling Tyndall a nazi, nobody much cared. The war was a long time ago and Britain was in the craphouse, and look how well Germany and Japan were doing. Looking back I suppose one of the reasons I was an attractive recruit for the NF was that I had been a Tory councillor and I had a few bob to give the party when I joined.

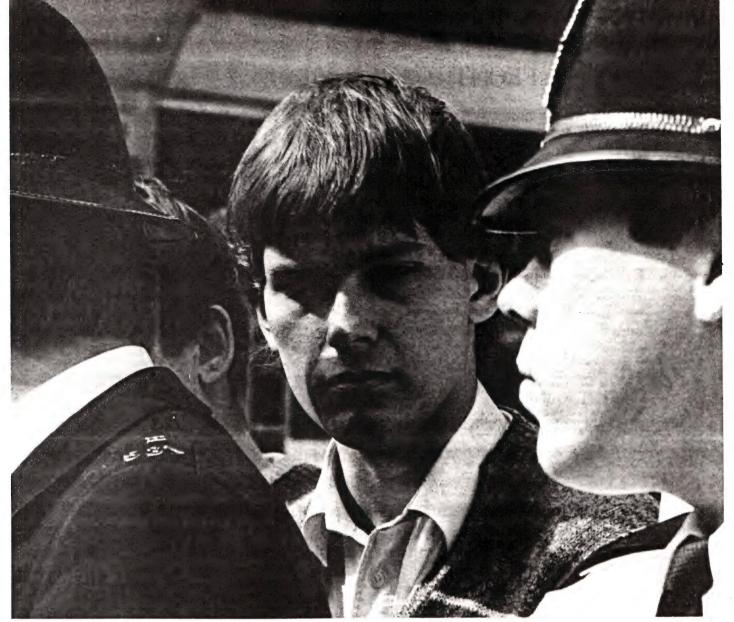

Once I had burned my bridges I felt there could never be any going back and I gave my unswerving loyalty to the movement through thick and thin. Even after Maggie took over the Tory party and a lot of my fellow NF members went back, I decided to stay put. For a short while I was even on the national directorate and even after J.T. (John Tyndall) had left in 1979 I felt that despite his little quirks Martin Webster was a very good organiser. Then there was this bright young man, Andrew Brons, who was a lecturer, and I felt that between them the NF was in safe hands. At that time I did not know that Brons had in fact been one of Colin Jordan's youngest supporters in the early 1960s and had once written a letter questioning whether it was politically correct, or not, to burn down synagogues.

But what used to get under many people's skins were Webster's internal security operations. I remember that in the early 1970s accusations were thrown around that meeting of the an analysis assurances that the NF Directorate would be contacted and fully informed about the matter.

- (f) That by early 1983, if not before, Holland had become very closely involved with the Rising organisation and became, in effect, their principal contact man and the effective Editor of Rising, or at least a co-editor. In conducting his work for Rising Holland used the 'nom de plume' "Richard Murphy". Holland was instrumental in securing the co-option of NF Directorate member R. Paul Matthews as a co-editor of Rising in his own name. Matthews, like Holland, is a devout Roman Catholic "Counter Reformationist".
- (g) That probably the first of the Rising seminars was held at Liss in April 1983. A select number of NF members and officials attended this gathering. The subject of the seminar was not raised by any member of the Directorate at a Directorate meeting, or otherwise.
- (h) That a further seminar at Liss was held over a weekend late in August 1983. This was attended by some of the Italians, Nick Griffin, Paul Matthews, Patrick Harrington (who recently replaced Michael Walker as Organiser of Central London NF Branch), Peter Sheppherd (from Scotland), Tom Acton (NF Auditor) a number of other NF members, and various other people, including three members of John Tyndall's British National Party from East Anglia who are personal friends of Nick Griffin. A coy attempt to 'inform' the NF about this meeting was made by means of sending to NF Chairman Andrew Brons an invitation to the seminar (a personal invitation) but this communication was sent on Candour notepaper, not on Rising notepaper, and while the invitation mentioned "a seminar" it did not go into any relevant details. Mr. Brons did not attend. He says he did not attack any importance to it and therefore did not think to raise the matter at the Directorate.
- (i) That great pains were taken by those who organised the seminar to preserve secrecy. The principal letter of invitation was photocopied on Rising notepaper and were signed "Richard Murphy" (i.e. by Derek Holland). The invitation included the injunction: "Do not tell anybody about this". This call for secrecy was enthusiastically abided by in the case of Peter Sheppherd. By coincidence Ian Anderson and I had been making a tour of Scotland visiting NF units just prior to the August Rising seminar. Sheppherd attended the Edinburgh NF meeting and then begged a lift with us to London. He told us he was "going to Hampshire to have a camping holiday with some of my university friends". He spent ten hours in the company of the NF Deputy-Chairman and a member of its Executive without confiding in us that he was in fact going to a secret weekend political training seminar organised by Rising in collaboration with a number of NF members and officials, including two members of the
- (j) That at the August seminar Patrick Harrington spoke to Nicholas Griffin and asked him: "Does the Directorate know what's going on? Does Martin know what is happening? . . . You had better put your cards on the table with the NF quickly or suspicions will be aroused." Griffin promised that he would raise the whole question of what was going on at the next available Directorate meeting, but

As this kind of information started to percolate through to me I was obviously disturbed. Some of my Directorate colleagues seem to think that a took a far too serious a view of the whole matter and Police protecting Harrington during demonstrations against his presence as a student at North London Polytechnic.

Webster had turned in some Front members who were also UDA and UVF gun runners. In fact he had to drop out of sight for some time because there was talk of Loyalist hit men coming to sort him out. I remember him once boasting that he had turned in somebody who had machine gun parts to Special Branch. He seemed to have a very special relationship with them and some of the other directorate members told me that he kept the authorities off our backs by feeding the SB with information on our political opponents like the commies, the CND and later on the Anti-Nazi League. There is no doubt Martin was very good at it, placing people inside these organisations. In fact I suppose the first time I came across Patrick Harrington, it was in that context. The young lad was one of Martin's infiltrators. I am not saying he knew the information he was gathering was being passed on to Special Branch, but it seemed to be in his nature to run to the boss telling tales.

It is odd looking back now seeing Patrick as one of the leaders of the NF and so close to these Italian terrorist exiles, because in the early days of their arrival Webster used him to spy on them. I suppose it is also a strange quirk of history that some people think Fiore was also a spy for a section of Italian intelligence. Somebody said to me the other day, what other reason could there be for the way the Home Office have so steadfastly looked out for the Italians' interests since they have been here.

Harrington's life seems to be full of coincidences; his older sister was once a member of the Workers' Revolutionary Party, that mob that was financed by Gaddafi. And now we have young Patrick going off to Tripoli with a couple of other National Front chiefs as guests of the regime.

Harrington has always encouraged a great deal of flak in his own direction. Mainly it is the disdain he shows for most other human beings. I remember being at a WISE meeting, the group of ultra Tories that used to have large numbers of NF members at its meetings, and there was young Patrick with a team of minders at the back of the hall. After the meeting was over and they had finished looking after their Tory friends, he was selling papers outside and lost a good contact for the NF when one of the ultra Tories tried to discuss Strasserism with him. Whilst it was all new to Patrick, this middle aged well-to-do chap seemed to know a great deal about the subject, but was treated like a lump of dirt.

His overwhelming obsession with violence as a means of achieving his political ends has also worried many people. The trouble he nearly got us into when he got himself taperecorded in Islington, justifying fire bombings and an assault on a young woman that left her with a fractured skull as being par for the course in revolutionary politics, has never faded even after all these years. He has been careful though not to add to the two convictions he got in his teens for breaches of the Public Order Act.

NATIONAL FRONT

The Movement of the Puture

Please reply to: P.O. Box 35, Isleworth, Middx TW7 7JB.

TO: SEAN O'NEILL, CITY LIMITS

3 May 1988.

Dear Sir,

In your article "Office politics" (CL343) you refer to Mr. Paul Nash as "the spokesperson for the National Front's 'British Names for British Places' campaign". In fact, no such campaign exists and Nash is not a member of the National Front, having been expelled in 1986, along with the rest of the group surrounding "The Flag" newspaper.

This small clique of racists, fascists and reactionaries is now operating as a separate organisation, though it still fraudulently refers to itself as the National Front. Its members were expelled from our organisation after having been found guilty of a number of disciplinary offences - in most cases disloyalty and misappropriation of funds.

We wish it to be known that Hounslow National Front had never expressed nor held any intention of campaigning against the proposal by members of Hounslow Council to name a street or public building after Udham Singh, whom we regard as having been a freedom fighter and national revolutionary.

We further wish it to be known that any attempt by these fascists to organise or campaign anywhere in Hounslow will prove for them to be extremely counter-productive.

With regard to Nash's campaign against the naming of London streets after Nelson Mendela, I can reveal that Nash was the man responsible for auctioning the Mendela Way street sign which was stolen from a street in London s.E.1. Before it was auctioned the sign was defaced with spraypaint. Kore detailed information can be obtained, either by yourselves or by Couthwark Council, from me if required.

The enclosed photographs show Paul Nash (with microphone), Andrew Brons and Ian Anderson (holding street sign). Nash resides at 53 Fenton Road, London N17; Brons at 42 Eyland Road, Harrogate, N. Yorkshire and Anderson at Peacon Way Printers in Stratford, East London.

I would appreciate it if you would clarify the above points as soon as possible.

Yours sincerely,

Phil andrews - Press Officer, Hounslow National Front.

(Tel: 01-892 4260)

ABOVE: The political soldiers 'grass' the Flag group for stealing a street sign. Below: Lillian Bennett, Harrington's mother and financial and political backer of the political soldiers. She also dabbles in the occult.

But some of us older ones who had served in the armed forces used to take the rise out of him. He was always ready to threaten the enemy verbally if he had about twenty big blokes behind him, but at the height of his troubles at the North London Polytechnic I heard he bottled out one day despite a massive police presence to protect him. It was only his woman lawyer's urging to show some spine that eventually persuaded him to leave the building.

I do not go in for all this Freudian claptrap, but I suppose if you had Lillian Bennett for a mother, you might well have problems in your formative years. Today she is one of the mainstays of the NF leadership allowing the telephone in her home, a flat in Chelsea, to be used as the national contact line for the NF. She also acts as signatory on a number of bank accounts for the movement. We knew her better for her interest in the black arts and little quirks like making wax models of her son's political enemies to stick pins in.

At the time the NF dumped Webster a fully blown 'dirty

Well hear this Tyndal we are the revalitionary cordes and were not going to take any more of your nazi behavoir you be ther beleive me then I say you time is coming well wipe you out with no marcy like the right wing facist soum you are. We arreall Islamic insulationary supporters and we have freinds in Libyans and Iranians.

Extracts from nazi threat letters.

shot and we pray each night that me eat the scome the senary traitors like Fleximer and Bladeelole are in the by our national revalutionary brother. You tuckers support the reactionary british state and interesting don't you your beneath contempt.

tricks' war broke out. Webster was a past master at political 'rough housing' and when an anonymous broadsheet appeared, clearly coming from the new owners of the NF, under the title Gay News, Webster retaliated swiftly using his personal and insider knowledge of the new regime's bosses. Not only did he put them on the spot for their Libyan and Italian connections, but he also went into great detail about their sexual hang-ups.

Webster was angry both on his own behalf and on behalf of some of his closest followers who were being harassed through their employers and families. The person who was held to be mainly responsible for this aggro was a very close and dear friend of Patrick Harrington, Nicky Barrett, otherwise known as the "Hairy Bear". For some strange reason Webster's circulars kept referring to Harrington as Mrs Barrett.

The more the new brigade poured it on, the more they were exposed as a bunch of very strange people.

I heard from some former fellow members that after the second split in the NF things became even more acrimonious, with a war of words raging between the two wings of the NF. For instance when Searchlight found out that Steve Brady, a convicted criminal and key member of the Flag group of the NF, was working for Mercedes Benz in Milton Keynes, they published this fact. The political soldier wing of the NF then wrote to Mercedes Benz and told them that Brady was in their employ. And in another letter to former NF Chairman Andrew Brons they accused him of being a police spy and then, to add some menace to their ravings, they claimed that they were closely allied to Islamic fundamentalists and black nationalists who would be turned loose on Brady, Wingfield and co. They also said they were glad about the deaths of WPC Yvonne Fletcher and PC Keith Blakelock and boasted that they had grassed Paul Nash, Brons, Brady and Anderson to the magazine City Limits and to the police for stealing a street sign.

On this occasion the Flag group's response was swift and pretty accurate according to those who knew anything about the political soldiers. In a circular Holland was described as "that poison dwarf" and a "Fenian loving bastard", and unrepeatable remarks about Griffin's private life followed. Fishwick was described as "Rambo" and it suggested that one of the five-man directorate was having a fling with little Jacqui Cosgree, a political soldier activist.

The political soldiers did not confine their rantings to the Flag Group, they also singled out the BNP for a good deal of verbal abuse, describing them as enemies of the national revolution and threatening that they too would be dealt with by the Libyans.

I bumped into Patrick again about three years ago. He was busily engaged in photographing what looked like middle eastern students. We were not on speaking terms, as I had been expelled in the first purge of the NF in 1983, but he looked extremely embarrassed that I should see him doing this. I walked around the block and came back and approached the students. I discovered they were Iranian dissidents.

I watched Harrington on the TV programme about the Front and even I was surprised when he refused to condemn the IRA as killers of civilians. But I suppose it is just a reflection of their close association with Gaddafi and the potential financial support it could bring them.

Wayne's tale

I am 23 years old and was brought up on a council estate in one of Britain's biggest cities. I was still at school when I heard about the National Front, but it seemed a bit tame for me, and when I was 14 I started to run with a local gang of skins whose leaders were in British Movement. You knew where you stood in those days. They didn't try to cram a lot of politics down your throat and it was a good chance to go out and get the boot into a few pakis. I was inside for a bit because of this.

But in 1982 I started to go to gigs organised by groups that supported the NF and shortly afterwards I joined. It was quite straightforward; you filled in a form, they checked you out a bit and you were in. No problem, you paid your dues and did as you were told.

I did not like going out selling papers but I was always prepared to go along and act as a minder to those who did. This was mainly at weekend street markets and football matches. We had our own paper in the Young National Front, Bulldog. Its editor was Joe Pearce. I could get on with Joe because he was like me, working class through and through, and from one of the big estates in Dagenham, east London. Bulldog had pages about music and also a lot about the rucks on the football terraces. We really took the piss. We had a league of louts chart for our heroes, not those of the rich Jewboys who run football. We soon had it down to a fine art. We could sell papers outside the grounds and then go inside, give a lot of verbal to black players and get the boot into anyone who tried to stop us.

It also meant for the first time in my life I could travel. We went to lots of international matches and I suppose we are the ones who got England the reputation for being the hard cases. I was out of work most of the time but there was always a few guid or a free ticket from the movement to make sure we could be where they wanted us.

Joe really proved himself when they sent him off to prison for running Bulldog, but he had an easy time inside, the

'GEORDIES ARE WI

"Geordies are White" is one of the favourite slogans among the racist 'louts' at Newcastle. In fact, Newcastle fans believe they should be much higher in the League of Louts than be much higher in the League of Louts than they are at the moment.

Bulldog and NF News are sold regularly at St. James' Park and Newcastle's racist following is growing all the time. Here is just one example of Newcastle fans in action:—

After a recent game in London Newcastle fans were drinking in Soho when a group of Black prostitutes and their Black pimps came into the pub. The NUFC 'louts' took exception to this and they told the Blacks so in no uncertain terms. One of the Blacks then attacked a Geordie with a glass, just missing him. Outside the pub the Geordie gave the Black pimp the beating of his life.

Besides giving Black pimps a beating, Newcastle 'louts' always make themselves heard whenever a Black player is on the pitch. They may not have as many 'louts' as Leeds, Chelsea and West Ham, but White Power at St. James' Park is growing fast.

'Racist thugs' at Rochdale

ROCHDALE supporters are a bunch of "racist thugs". That was the verdict of Manchester Crown Court when three Rochdale fans were charged with 'breach of the peace'.

The three Vale fans were accused of being part of a group of 400 Rochdale supporters who were chanting racist slogans at rival supporters.

The court heard that a number of racist chants echoed around the ground. The main chant was "There ain't no Black in the Union Jack — Send them niggers back!"

Following the chanting of these slogans the police rushed onto the terraces. They threw dozens of Vale fans out of the ground but their heavy-handed attitude has only made Rechale supporters even more racist Rochdale supporters even more racist than before

Dear Bulldog,

I buy your paper regularly, but a lot of the football clubs are the same. Leeds, Chelsea, Spurs, West Ham are in nearly every issue of Bulldog, I follow Rochdale AFC and am a keen NF supporter, and I am one of many at the Sandy Lane End.

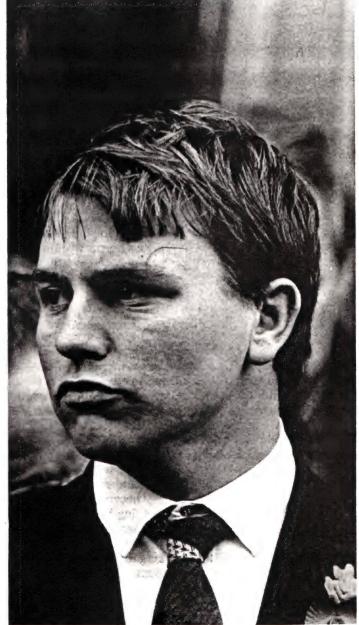

At every home match racialist chants and songs can be heard. The police try to stop us and recently a Paki conner anneared at a us, and recently a Paki copper appeared at a match. He got a lot of abuse and has not been seen at the Dale since. If you print this letter it will show people that there is NF support at small grounds as well as big

Yours faithfully,

RAFC NF

OUR FIGHT! Britain for the British, Stop immigration orium for the British, Stop immigration— start repatriation. Put Whites first in housing and jobs. British jobs for British workers, Ban foreign imports—build up our own industries. Support the Uister Loyalists. Smash the IRA IRA: Get Britain out of the Common Market, Stop all overseas aid, Build homes and Stop all overseas aid. Build hospitals for our own people. Smash Communism! Please send me further information about the YNF, I enclose 30p | Tick box nber of the YNF. I enclose £3.00 - Tick box. send to The Secretary, 50 Pawsons Board, Convident, Surrey CRO 2QF

LEFT: Bulldog praise for football louts. ABOVE: Joe Pearce, now helping to run the NF by remote control. Here he is at a Remembrance Day parade in

ABOVE: Fascism let loose on the terraces. Chisel-wielding thug attacks innocent by-standers at an international match. Below: Membership and supporter card covers of the NF political soldier wing.

Special Report By Gary Rossi

screws made sure he got the best of everything and he was even banged up with other young nazis who were doing time for their political activities.

I was really politically stupid. When the pro-Italian group slung Webster out they asked me to stay put. But they told me proper membership in future will have to be earned. I said I thought I had done more than my bit and had the convictions and scars to prove it. They replied they were not talking about undisciplined hooliganism, they were now looking to build a revolutionary movement of which they would be the elite and only those prepared to study, pay more money for membership and be totally obedient to party discipline would have any chance of becoming full members, and that would take a long while. I found myself in a sort of vacuum, neither expelled nor fully in with the political soldiers. But they would still call on me from time to HALESWORTH AREA CON-SERVATIVE BRANCH. Various social and political meetings throughout the year. For details phone E.V. Griffin, Ubbeston 266. New members always welcome. Women's Section also hold monthly coffee mornings.

ABOVE: Article in Nationalism Today, the political soldiers' journal, signed by Rossi. In reality the author is Gary Gallo, top US new wave national revolutionary. Below: Hundreds of Ian Stuart Donaldson's boneheads rave it up at Edwin Griffin's Suffolk home. RIGHT: Edwin Griffin; his local paper shows his Conservative Party links.

time to mind the officers or keep an eye on our street activities. Joe was very supportive, however, and although surprisingly well read and self-educated, he was not like the people who had taken over, whom I can only describe as snobs.

Shortly afterwards Joe was sent to prison again. He was a great inspiration for us all. Whilst his codefendant, Ian Anderson, squirmed and wriggled in the witness box, Joe said he was going to prison proud of his beliefs and knowing that for the first time in its history the NF knew where it was going and was preparing a new generation of leaders and policies for the 1990s. They were telling us that by the mid 1990s a combination of mass unemployment, a more repressive state and the running out of North Sea oil would lead to a situation where we could put into action the thousands of cadres we would have trained by then, to lead a dispossessed generation to power. This would be going on not only in Britain but also in America, Scandinavia and the rest of Western Europe. To do this we would not only have to be politically trained but would also have to form alliances with all sorts of other groups that wanted to topple whoever was in power, Labour or the Conservatives.

I had noticed that some of our key activists were participating in activities that would have been unthinkable in the past, such as the 'stop the city' demonstrations run by anarchist and 'direct action' groups, animal rights marches and anti-nuclear and conservationist activities.

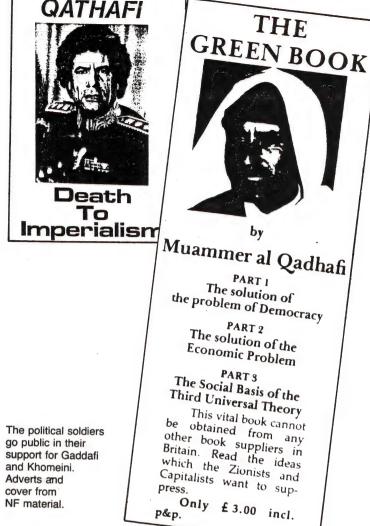

Apart from the Italians, I began to notice that we had regular visitors from other parts of Europe, and also two leading American far right activists, Gary Gallo and Bob Hoy. The latter was an excellent photographer who recorded the plight of dispossessed youngsters in the USA, Britain and Ireland. I wondered what Gallo was all about. I was told that his party in the States was to be similar to our own, and that he would help us set up a cell system in case we had to go underground. This was probably why he used several aliases during his long stays in Britain. We were warned to be very careful not to talk about him because Special Branch were asking a lot of questions.

We had already had one narrow squeak when a long-time National Front member, Graham Gilmore, returned from southern Africa, where he had served first as a mercenary for Ian Smith's regime in Rhodesia and later in a special commando of the South African army raiding into Angola and Mozambique. He had not been alone out there, he had other Fronters with him. It was decided that this Rambo figure would take charge of training an elite bodyguard unit for the NF. In the main it was weekends taken up with precision marching, a bit of boxing and unarmed combat. But finally at a weekend course held in southern England Gilmore was joined by Ian Souter Clarence, an aging former member of a special forces regiment of the British army and until recently the military commander of Column 88. We were taken through a series of night ambush exercises and shown how to strip down and reassemble guns. Clearly we had been infiltrated because shortly afterwards these activities ceased in Britain and Gilmore gave up his private security business in west London and moved to Peterborough. A couple of years ago he turned up again with a former NF candidate, Tony Hilton, trying to recruit mercenaries.

One of the events I used to most look forward to was the twice yearly gig put on by Skrewdriver, which would attract hundreds of skinheads and young activists from all over Britain and Europe. I was asked to assist in organising the summer event held in the grounds of Edwin Griffin's home in Suffolk. Edwin, an accountant by profession, is a local Tory party official despite his long standing support for the NF and its activities. His son, Nick, was a Cambridge graduate and had been an NF parliamentary candidate. He was one of the key people involved in ousting Webster a couple of years earlier.

Graham Gilmore, former NF candidate and mercenary, seen here during a mercenary recruiting exercise two years

One of Nick's closest associates was a well heeled young man, Tony Williams. This Porsche-driving yuppie was giving over much of his time and money to supporting hard line nazi causes. He had visited the American Nazi Party and had arranged the funeral of one of the key nazi ideologues, Savitri Devi, when she died in the early 1980s. Williams and Griffin hit on a way of raising several hundred pounds for the Front's coffers at this summer gig. The hundreds of boneheads who would dance and sniff themselves into a frenzy would always need to be supplied with large quantities of beer. Williams had access to a wholesaler in this line who had a huge stock of out of date, gone off, Dutch beer, which they obtained at about 5p a can and sold to the unsuspecting youth movement at a £1 a can. Large numbers of the participants were sick for days later with stomach disorders. But the aspiring NF leadership thought it was a bit of a hoot.

I suppose it was at this point that I realised we were there to be used and abused without any respect whatsoever from the people who were supposed to lead us by example. The experience from Griffin and Williams was in a similar vein to what the Searchlight mole, Ray Hill, revealed about Derek Holland. Hill had spent a lot of time close to Holland in Leicester, where Holland was studying and working part time for nazi lawyer Anthony Reed Herbert, who after a World in Action expose into gun running fled into exile in Eire. Hill says Holland was for ever trying to get young members to go out and attack Asians, and spoke of race war with a gleam in his eye. Using the excuse of protecting his own young members, Hill asked Holland how he felt about violence and suggested some contact with it might readjust his view. He then proceeded to sock Holland in the jaw and knocked him flat on his back.

I found Holland a strange character. Our own members used to refer to him, as some of his neighbours do today, as "that little creep", but I would say from my experience that the word "dangerous" should be inserted in the description. Holland is now in his thirties. He was born in the Irish Republic and is a fundamentalist and fanatical Catholic who supports the Archbishop Lefebvre school of thought. He has openly spoken in praise of the Inquisition describing it as the Christian church's "last bastion against the pernicious Jew" and saying a new one was long overdue. It is this attachment to fundamentalism that he tells people has attracted him to the regime of the Ayatollahs in Iran. Clearly the bloody purges, repression of women and the torture chambers are right up his street. Until recently the bedroom he occupies in his mother's home in Huntington resembled more the interior of the Libyan People's Bureau than the room of an unemployable young man. It came as no surprise to me when I heard that he had joined Harrington and Griffin as guests of the Libyan regime in September 1988.

In 1986 there was a big upheaval. The strongest supporters of the Italian exiles and an outright revolutionary approach purged those of our comrades who had a lesser public commitment to putting up the barricades or praising people who let off bombs. The group that was purged became known as the NF Flag group, taking the title from their party paper, and the revolutionaries who took control of the National Front have become known as the political soldiers and, to many inside the movement, as the Tripoli branch of the NF. The political soldiers are led by Nick Griffin, Patrick

Dear Comrade,

The disciplinary tribunals will soon be out of the way and complete victory ours. We must begin to turn out attention to other matters. It is without a doubt that Nick, Derek and Paul have slipped up badly during thissaffair, Nick by writing the letter to Pearce. This issue is now a trump card in the enemies hands, and they are playing it to the full. When Pearce comes out we must act quickly to neutralise him, for he has considerable popular support within the party. We wouldn't have to do this but for Nick's stupidity. It shows lack of judgement especially in a 'Chairman'.

Derek has fucked the book shop well and truly. I hope he can produce accounts. Paul in turn has messed up the membership card business. Organisers up and down the country are going mad about it. All this could backfire on us badly in months to come.

I believe that when the dust settles on the current dispute a certain three gentlemen should be quietly phased out of things. Start to select one or two members in your locality with a view to grooming them as possible replacements, They shouldn't be too intelligent, just able to raise their hands when we vote.

Please destroy this letter after you have read it, we don't want it falling into the wrong hands. I won't sign it just in case. I'll give you a ring in a few days and we will discuss the matter further over a drink.

ABOVE: Unsigned letter accusing Griffin of losing the political soldier wing the support of Pearce after he left prison the second time. TOP RIGHT: Derek Holland runs for cover after being caught out at a secret training course for political soldiers in Hampshire. RIGHT: Former Civil Servant John Field (left) from London, the political soldiers' first full-time Ulster organiser. This job was taken over recently by Stuart McCullough, the Welsh organiser.

Harrington, Derek Holland, Graham Williamson and a young banker, Mark Alder. Despite all their pronouncements of being a revolutionary and third positionist movement, not a single one of them could be accused of being working class. The one saving grace for them in that direction would have been Joe Pearce, but Pearce, who was in prison at the time of the purge, decided after almost endless deliberation and his recent conversion to Catholicism to go with the Flag group.

Any chance the political soldiers may have had of keeping him in their ranks was probably finally dashed by a letter Nick Griffin wrote to Joe before he came out of prison. It is said that it was so hard line it pushed Joe into the other group. It certainly led to a lot of recriminations on our side in the months that followed.

Or perhaps Joe had heard about the ceremonial burning of the NF's Union Jacks to chants of "long live death", and saw this as them finally divorcing themselves from reality. Clearly by now the political soldiers were nothing but tools of Gaddafi and Khomeini.

The Flag group is led by Ian Anderson, Martin Wingfield, Steve Brady, Andrew Brons and Pearce. These men have set about not only trying to make new recruits but also using original NF membership lists to re-recruit members who have fallen by the wayside or been purged in the last few years. They have had reasonable success with this and as the political soldiers grow more extreme by the day, the Flag group are able to pick up newly purged members. They have also made a concordat with Tyndall's British National Party to work together over certain issues. They have not abandoned the ballot box but the 286 votes cast in the Epping by-election in December 1988 show that the public have certainly abandoned them.

One of the biggest assets in financial terms that the political soldiers had held onto was Ian Stuart Donaldson's 'White Noise' movement. The sales in all parts of the world of records, tapes, videos, badges and t-shirts are now worth tens of thousands of pounds. After the political soldier leadership tried to divert this massive income into paying for the party's propaganda work, a very acrimonious split occurred, with Harrington and Holland retaining the name 'White Noise' and Donaldson and Nicky Crane launching the independent 'Blood and Honour' set up.

In the two years since the second purge I remained in limbo. It was a couple of events that finally drove me out of the movement. Because I did not satisfy the new image they were wishing to create, it was suggested I might best serve the movement by spending some time in Ulster. The far right in Britain, in particular the NF, have always had a close association with the Protestant paramilitaries. As Harrington put it himself on TV recently, you cannot be involved in politics in Ulster without getting mixed up with the paramilitaries.

The two people who had been closest to the UDA and UVF in recent years had been Steve Brady and Joe Pearce, despite the fact that they were both Catholics. The political soldiers decided to make their own bid for the big time over there by having the only public face of their organisation in the whole of the UK in the form of a bookshop in Belfast. They had sent in from London political soldier John Field to join forces with David Kerr, a member of the Ulster Clubs, an allegedly respectable organisation, to run the Front's Ulster activities.

Their reputation for indulging in threats and violence had preceded them. Bulldog, when it still existed, had run hitlists and one of these had included the name of a Belfast journalist, Jim Campbell, who, within hours of his name appearing, had been gunned down on the steps of his home and nearly fatally wounded. The following edition of Bulldog crowed that he had fallen victim to the curse of Bulldog. The men later convicted for the shooting were members of the UVF, but thought also to be associated with the National Front.

When the Hillsborough Agreement was signed and full scale rioting broke out in Ulster, the NF political soldiers took to the streets and also led the fire bomb attacks on the homes of RUC officers. The Front's Ulster treasurer, a school master, Andy McLorie, and a number of other NF activists were convicted and sent to prison. The Front, far from condemning this lawlessness, described them as prisoners of war and entered their names on a roll of honour. I think it was then I realised that I was associated with a totally lawless organisation that was prepared to attack anything or anybody if they felt it politically expedient.

During this period I was not alone in being sent over to what the leadership described as the place where the action is. Clearly they intended to use the experience gained in Ulster as a springboard for their activities on the mainland, and it was not only to give members the experience of mass street disorders, but also because of their ability to train people alongside the paramilitary Protestant groups. The training alongside the UDA and UVF proved so successful that the programme was extended to members of the NF's sister organisations in Sweden and Norway.

I was very shocked one day to find that we were also expected to try and recruit Catholics who had been expelled from Republican organisations for disobeying orders. In 1987 Derrick Turner, the leader of an Irish neo-nazi group, the Social Action Initiative, came north from Eire to meet us in Belfast. The meeting took place in the UDA headquarters. NF members in Ulster now found themselves subject to surveillance by MI5, rather than by Special Branch. We had clearly crossed from being a fringe political organisation into a potential terrorist group. Turner may have been one of the reasons for this upgraded interest.

Some time earlier he had safe-housed Gerhard Topfer, an on-the-run young German criminal and leading national revolutionary activist. Topfer is closely associated with other German and French terrorists who are linked with George Ibrahim Abdallah and his group, the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction, one of the key international terror groups. They have been responsible for assassinations, kidnappings and the 1986 bombing campaign in Paris. The hijacking of the liner Achile Lauro was praised by both Topfer and the NF, and Topfer, who now lives in London, has suggested that "a little dynamite is always useful". Topfer's comrade, Odfried Hepp, was arrested in the Paris apartment of George Ibrahim Abdallah.

The other interesting thing about Turner is that at the time of his visit he was a serving member of the Irish navy stationed at their highly sensitive communications centre in Cork. With other nazis in his organisation he had been a member of the crew of a ship transporting arms to the Irish contingent of the United Nations peace keeping force in the Lebanon. Somewhere between Eire and Haifa in Israel ten self-loading rifles disappeared from the cargo. Turner also now lives in London.

In 1987 both wings of the National Front joined the annual Loyalist parades and anti-Hillsborough demonstrations in Belfast and sold thousands of copies of our normally very low circulation publications. Just before I left in 1988 great store was being set on repeating this success, and despite the apparent acrimony between the two wings of the Front, ÛÎster was divided up between them for the sales campaign. But the campaign flopped disastrously and the explanation of one of the NF chiefs, Graham Williamson, for this disaster finally showed me how little respect or genuine political allegiance this bunch have for even their closest allies.

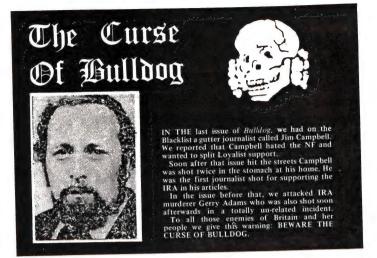

The two-faced approach of my leaders was never more apparent, and this was the final straw that led me to leave, when I visited the Cambridge home of a man called Sean

BULLDOG BLACKLIST

85 Greville Janner

86 Jim Campbell

87 Leon Brittan

Inhitiati in court visitaridey in NF barner.

TOP: The infamous Bulldog hitlist which names Ulster iournalist Jim Campbell. MIDDLE: Bulldog gloats after the attempt to murder Campbell. ABOVE: Andrew McLorie, NF Ulster treasurer charged over bombings. RIGHT: The political soldiers' role of honour - thugs, criminals and bombers.

The following text was written by Andy Mc-Lorie, the NF's former Belfast Branch Organ-izer who was framed up by the 'Official Hooligans' of the RUC. The text speaks for itself - it explains why we must tear down the British State and replace it with a system that guarantees Social Justice to all of our People.

IN THE MONTHS preceding our arrest, I,as one of the committee of the Belfast branch, was more than pleased to see rapid expansion and progress for the NF in Ulster. Determination, hard work and dedication by the branch members, who were all keen and relentless activists, meant that membership even set foot in the street where the actual petrol bombing took place. The area in question was where we lived, so our crime comes to walking in the neighbourhood and being members of the NF.

chance to lift us. We were charged with conspiracy to petrol bomb, possession of petrol bombs, and the actual throwing of petrol bombs. The horror of brutal interrogation and what I can only describe as internment BOMBING by remand was about to unfold.

CASTLEREAGH

was active was not lit. As if to emphasize this even more the detective took off his coat and draped it over the lens. He need not have bothered, for even if the camera had been active it does not record a film of The Special Branch, however, seized the the interview; it merely transmits it live to a supposedly alert uniformed officer who instead generally sits bored reading a news-

When eventually the interview began for real, it became obvious they were after ABOVE: Threat in Nationalism Today to "tear down the state" after NF Ulster bombers are jailed. RIGHT: Switch in NF publications to what some members see as pro-Fenian material.

History, Identity, Culture

IN OUR last issue we took a brief look at the Fenian cycle of mythology and its relevence to Ulster's claim for Independence. In this issue we return again to the Ulster cycle and Cu Chulainn. Champion of Uister.

BELOW: Swedish nazis closely connected with the political soldier wing of the NF. Both the NF political soldiers and the Blood and Honour group have targeted Sweden for attention to such an extent that they now have resident liaison officers there.

TOP: Scorpion, the platform for the new up-market nazis. The ideological journal of the Strasserites in Britain, it is also the vehicle for leading new right think-tank member Richard Lawson and his lona group (top right). ABOVE LEFT: Derrick Turner, founder of SAI, the Irish neo-nazi movement, now living in London. ABOVE RIGHT: Michael Walker, editor and publisher of Scorpion, the third positionist publication, and former partner and flatmate of Nick Griffin and Roberto Fiore. RIGHT: Gerhard Topfer, an on-the-run German nazi activist in London. BELOW: Bedfordshire Patriot, a local publication of the NF, praises the hijackers of the liner Achile Lauro and the killers of Jewish victim Leon Klinghofer.

íona

IONA is an independent cultural society devoted to the study, revival, promotion, development and enjoyment of the islands of the North Atlantic. It is centred on London and south-east England, and organises monthly events and activities. For further information please write to: The Secretary, Iona, BCM-Iona, London WC1N 3XX.

CONGRATULATIONS

The Bedfordshire National Front would like to congratulate the P L F (Palestine Liberation Front) who successfully proved that Jews cannot float in the Mediterranean Sea (Leon Klinghoffer). The Bedfordshire National Front will try to test this theory in lakes, streams, ponds, etc.. until the supply of Jews have run out.

Ulster Report

Selling

900 - 1000 but only 200 on the day of the 12th. This was because of rain and external factors. Bad publicity and that it is still an English movement. Also alot of problems with the emphasis on Gadaffi, the shamrock motif and the fenian cadre, not to mention having to deal with drunken loyalists. Dave Durrant was as good as usual, particularly in the new areas such as Ballymena etc.

Top level political soldiers' report spells out their drop in support in Ulster and blames the "drunken Loyalists" and their own pro-Libyan line.

O'Hogan. This man, who is a small time property developer and a personal friend of Nick Griffin, was keen to stimulate a more intellectual approach among the political soldiers in the Cambridge area. O'Hogan had all the right credentials; upwardly mobile, he had plenty of money, but it was more in the area of whom he knew and what he believed, that he was especially qualified to fulfil the role of a recruiter of undergraduates for the political soldiers.

One of his closest friends was the former central London organiser of the NF, Michael Walker. Walker now lives in West Germany, but a few years ago his flat in Warwick Square, Pimlico, had been the centre of the universe for the political soldiers. Under one roof lived Walker; Italian terrorist Roberto Fiore; Robin Davies, political secretary to both revisionist historian David Irving and the extreme right wing former deputy head of MI6, George Kennedy Young; and none other than Nick Griffin.

The multi-lingual Walker had built a whole range of top notch far right connections with his glossy magazine, Scorpion. Articles by a number of the original Strasserite elements in the National Front, like Richard Lawson, could be read on the pages of this publication. Around it had grown a complex network of groups that were purely nazi or in many cases outwardly respectable. These were targeted by the emerging political soldiers in the early and mid 1980s.

O'Hogan launched his political work in Cambridge through a vehicle called the Cambridge Forum, which was to be a cover for the recruitment of people who would be invited to meetings addressed by 'respectable' figures on the far right. Despite his hankering for a respectable image, he was keen for us to bring in a team of heavies to protect his first meeting and the handful of potential recruits were totally outnumbered by a vicious looking team of skinheads.

I must say that O'Hogan and his pretty young wife were attractive characters to a lot of us. Here was a guy who was making a few bob but still committed to the movement. And they were young, not a couple of old fogeys. I think one of the things that kept me with the Front, year in year out, despite my doubts had been its policy of rooting out drug pushers and drug abuse. So when I was invited to a social event at O'Hogan's plush home, I was sick to my guts. There were these people who were supposed to be our elite, our betters, our future masters, dishing out drugs to young easily influenced boneheads. I am pretty broad minded but the sexual proclivities of these people were a bit odd to say the least. I am not talking about being gay or anything like that — enough of my mates are into that scene for me to not be concerned — but this lot were real wierdos. And not only did they indulge in these antics, but these perverts also wanted to keep a photographic record of what went on.

Drug taking at political soldier Sean O'Hogan's home, aiding and abetting the youth.

Is he limbering up for a final call to arms? A guest at a social evening at Sean O'Hogan's Cambridge home.

Richard's tale

I would say I have always fancied the idea of a society run along somewhat feudal lines. Of course a pre-condition would have to be that I was one of the ruling elite. Essentially I suppose I am a pessimist. I think, as a society, we in the west are doomed, rising crime rates, intermarriage, lack of respect for institutions, reliance on nuclear power, and the general idea that people should be treated equally, no matter what their shortcomings racially or intellectually. At school we sometimes used to debate the state of the nation and its future, but this was not encouraged by our masters. At home my parents were token Tories, but part of the rat race that would probably have inclined them towards voting Labour under the right conditions.

Between school and university I took a job as a bus conductor. The garage I worked at was like the United Nations — every colour and type under the sun. One of the young drivers there was in the National Front. Of course this is ten years ago and he was one of the old style racist uncouth rank and file members. But I secretly admired him when all around condemned him as a racist and a nazi. A number of the articles in the papers and magazines he brought in to work I found interesting, but I could never envisage the likes of him saving, let alone running, this country at some future date.

After three months of nagging he pursuaded me to march with him on Remembrance Sunday and attend a rally afterwards addressed by the then leader, John Tyndall. I must say even now, the thought of marching with thousands of others with the drums beating and the flags of the white nations fluttering in the breeze, makes the hairs on the back of my neck tingle. On the other hand, despite his gesticulations and thumping the podium, I found John Tyndall a rather pompous lower middle class twit and totally uninspiring. But he was a smash hit with all but a small group of us in the audience who had read something in addition to Spearhead and National Front News.

It was to be my last contact with the NF for some years. At university I joined the Federation of Conservative Students and the Young Monday Club. But despite their open racism and support for South Africa and the more extreme elements within the Conservative Party, I found myself intellectually at odds with them, because they were not prepared to support a major rejigging of society that would secure the future of a white Britain.

Things did not go as planned for me. I left university with a poor Third, but with a growing interest in new technology, especially computers. Over the next couple of years I had a succession of unsatisfactory jobs.

Then one weekend I went to a meeting which was attended by all sorts of people with an interest in protecting the environment from what the state was allowing to happen to it. One of those at the meeting was a young American lawyer called Gary Gallo. He was a personable young man who told me he had been a student at West Point military academy but had left to pursue a career in law, working around the Washington and Virginia areas in the equivalent of what we would call legal aid centres here.

At first I took him to be a leftie, but at the end of the evening we went for a drink with two other men who were there with him. They turned out to be in the leadership of the National Front. They had come to the fore after the ousting of Martin Webster. Both were graduates and clearly came from a similar class background to myself. It turned out that Gallo was one of the most up and coming leaders of the new far right in America and was not only spending a lot of time in Britain helping to restructure the NF, but had also acted as host when NF chairman Nick Griffin had visited the States.

Gallo's connections in the States turned out to be pretty sinister. Members of one group to which he had introduced Griffin, the White People's Party, were later in court for offences ranging from illegal dealing in firearms to murder. Another contact on the Gallo network turned out to be Tom Metzger, a Ku Klux Klan leader from California who, like Gallo, was in the throes of setting up contacts with American black extremist groups who shared their idea that the USA should be divided up into apartheid-style separate states for whites and blacks.

Gallo shared my own enthusiasm for computers and we soon found ourselves together with a number of NF officials holding lengthy discussions on how to reorganise the NF into a series of multi-level cells linked by computers. I was surprised to see that they already had some thousands of pounds set aside to buy not only modern computing equipment but also desk top publishing and specialised typesetting machines.

LEFT: Gary Gallo, US third position boss and close ally of the NF. RIGHT: Tom Metzger, former KKK boss in California and now national revolutionary top dog. He is into new technology in a big way. His son John leads the US skinhead movement.

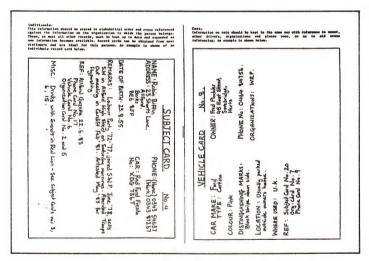

The White People's Party who received fulsome praise in Nationalism Today after Nick Griffin met them on his tour of the USA.

I was a relatively new outsider, but what appeared to count to them was my technical know-how and having a similar social background. Over the next weeks they bombarded me with a whole series of intimate questions about my background, my beliefs and how I saw the future of my country. This side of things was handled by Patrick Harrington and his Special Intelligence Department of the NF, commonly known as SID. I was told by several senior members that Harrington had basically continued an internal gestapo style operation which had been created by Martin Webster many years earlier. There had been some trepidation as to what the new leadership had found in the personnel files kept by Webster on most of the key members of the NF.

I found I had extremely little in common with Harrington, who was always full of himself, domineering in discussion and totally obsessed about gathering the tiniest pieces of information on what he saw as our key enemies, Searchlight magazine and the people who ran it. Many members thought this obsession was given undue precedence over much more important tasks for such a senior member of the organisation. Often it was clear even to the dimmest members that SID was getting basic information about our opponents totally wrong, but nobody ever seemed willing to face the wrath of Harrington by telling him. Maybe they thought he might club them over the head with the African walking stick with the weighted head that he had taken to carrying.

Stories were always circulating that Harrington's close chum, Nicky Barrett, was allowed to make dozens of phone calls at the movement's expense to those on Patrick's hate list. It was odd but those on the receiving end appeared more often than not to be members or former members of far right groups, rather than our stated enemies like the Jews and the left.

How Harrington's NF security department monitor their enemies.

Because of my technical know-how it was necessary for me to become privy to many of the party's, or as they now prefer to be known, movement's darkest secrets. For instance, despite the alleged open warfare between the two NF factions, which is supposed to have raged since they split more than two years ago, it did not take long for me to discover that the political soldier wing, of which I was part, was the training ground for the whole of the elite that would one day run the British far right. In the same way as I had been given direct entry to cadre training, other targeted recruits also enjoyed this privilege. One outstanding example was David Seawright, the younger brother of the Ulster extremist politician, George Seawright, who was

MARK	ALDER
DAVE	ALLAH
SIMON	ALLARD
PHIL	ANDREWS
JIM	ARCHER
MARK	ASKEV
RICHARD	BAGGELY
N	BARRER
RAY	BARKER BARKER
RAY	BARKER
NICK	BARRETT
ADRIAN	BEARERS
STUART KEVIN	BEATON
VCATA	BECKETT BENNETT
JOHNNY	BERG
RON PAUL	RERRY
PAUL	BLACKWOOD
R K MICHAEL	BLACKWOOD BOW
MICHAEL	BRAX
DETER	BRAX BRUNTON
PETER	BURKE
6	BURNETT
LEE GARY JOHN	BURTON
TOM	BUTLER
ANTHONY	BUTLER BYRNE
ANTHONY	BYRNE
[MR]	CALLISTON
PATRICK	CARVALO CATEL
ALEX IAN	CATEL
IAN	CATEL
RICHARD	CHADFIELD
RICHARD	CHANCE
BRENT	CHEETHAM
WEUTH	CHORUS CLANSLAGE
KEVIN DOUG	CLARKE
JACK	COACHWORTH
PAUL	COILS
JOHN	COMBEN
PAUL	COOPER
PAUL PAUL	COOPER COOPER
8	CORDER
JACKIE	COSGREE
I	COSTARD
C	COTTERILL
NICHOLAS VINCENZIA	CRANE
DADOEN	CREWE
DARREN MARTIN .	CROSS
	CROUCH
WYN	DAVIES
UYN PAUL DARRYN	DAVIES DEACON
DARRYN	DENNY
ALAN	DICKERSON
74.000	DORTHERASNUSSEN
JASON REG	DOUGLAS
CHOTE D	DOUGLAS DOWSETT
CHRIS P MANY	DOWSETT
EDVARD	ORAPER
JAMIE	DREV
ALAN BRIAN	DRURY
ALAM BRIAN PAUL DAVID	DUMBAR
DAVID	DUMBAR DURANT
R	ECCLES
AMANDA & VERA STEVE	FDWARDS
STEVE	EDWARDS
HERBERT	EGOLOT
DAVIO	ELLIS ELLISON
S E (OR) ROGER MARK	ELLISON EVANS
HADY	EXALL
S	FAIRBURN
JAMES RON	FENNESSY
DOM	FERRETT

ABOVE: Harrington's security team fails to safeguard lists of activists' names and addresses from Searchlight investigators. BELOW: Allocation of members for cadre training by political soldiers. 'J.D.F.' in control of Ulster denotes John Field.

NICK:	FISHWICK:	GRAHAM:
Neil Roberts	John Ross	Chris Dowsett
Dave Probert	Davey Seawright	Rick Law
Paul Marriott	Peter Shepherd	Brian McEver
Paul Reeves	Jean Trueman	Mark Askew
Glen Taylor	Paul Cooper	Jackie Cosgree
Chalky Rollinson	David Hargreaves	John Olivene
•	Kevin Wilshaw	Kevin Beckett
	Ian Leece	Phil Joyce
PAUL: Stuart McCullough
Mandy & Vera Edwards	DAVE COBELL:	PATRICK:
Nyn Davies	Ted Lawson	Wayne
Alan Dickerson	Bill Spinks	Nick Barrett
Pat F. Jim Archer	J. Gregory
Kevin Smithard	S. Vallance
Nevill Sillurard	Victor Logan	J.D.F.
	Roger Evans	All Ulster
DEREK:	Jason Douglas	Tall Call Con
Drury
Tennessey	CHRIS:
Darren Crewe	Peter Higgs
Steve Wilcox	Tany W
John Butler	Ray Barker
Steve Nuttall	John Perryman
Paul Dunbar Mark Syne.	Eddie Whicker

assassinated in early 1988. George Seawright had been a secret member of the NF for some years. Because of this family connection, David was inducted straight into the cadre training programme, took his oath of allegiance after one year and was immediately placed into the Flag group, where he became the Glasgow branch organiser. David Seawright is a rather colourful character who got off with a not proven verdict when he was tried in Scotland on charges of supplying weapons to Ulster Protestant extremists. He was not the only NF member in the dock at that trial.

LEFT: Davy Seawright on the march with the NF Flag group in 1988. MIDDLE: Eddy Whicker, political soldier and the leadership's top minder, now with the NF Flag group. RIGHT: Antony Hancock, one of the world's leading nazi printers and publishers who has links with terrorists throughout the world. He now prints NF News for the political soldiers.

Another well known political soldier on the more activist end of things is south London dustman Eddie Whicker, notorious for his violent temper, but admired for his bravery in tight corners. On completing his cadre course his minding activities have shifted from the chiefs of the political soldier group to the chief of the Flag group.

Further evidence of even more systematic co-operation became apparent during a visit I paid to Graham Williamson's home in Havering, east London. Williamson had jotted down times of trains to Uckfield in Sussex and had written the name Hancock against them. Even the least knowledgeable members of the NF or any other far right British group would know Uckfield is where the notorious neo-nazi publisher and printer Antony Hancock has his printworks. But what was more surprising to me was that Williamson, the vice chairman of the political soldier wing, should be going there because at that time Hancock had gone into partnership with Tom Acton, the NF's former auditor and printer who had allegedly defected to the Flag group. I could not resist asking about this at a high level, but I was answered with a nudge and a wink.

At'top level the Front's chiefs are pretty clean in terms of criminal convictions, with the exception of Patrick Harrington, and his are very minor. But one level down I soon found there was a disproportionate number of convicted criminals compared to the size of the movement. I do not recall any occasion where action was taken against any activist or officer who was convicted in the courts. In fact the very opposite was the norm, with promotion and praise heaped upon the guilty. Thugs like Colin Todd, James Fennessy, Martin Cross and Phil Andrews have all prospered.

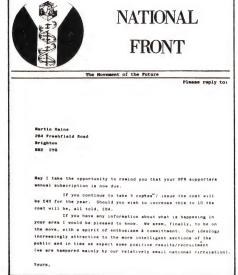

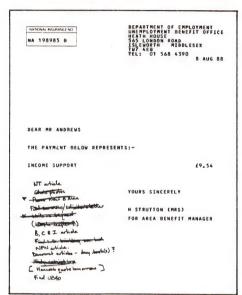

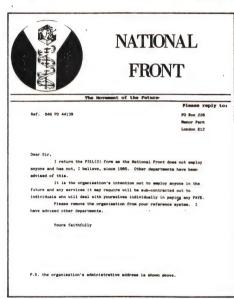

LEFT: Tom Acton is Hancock's business partner. He prints at the same printshop for their alleged rivals, the Flag group. MIDDLE: Colin Todd, political soldier, criminal and NF North East organiser. RIGHT: James Fennessy, political soldier, criminal and East Anglia organiser of the NF.

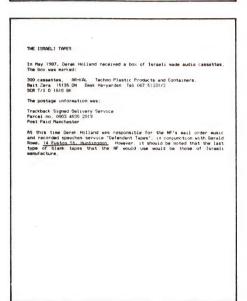

TOP LEFT: Martin Cross, former musician with "Skrewdriver", criminal and activist in Ulster and East London for the political soldiers. TOP MIDDLE: Phil Andrews, political soldier, West London organiser and criminal. NF chiefs blame him for inter-party hate mail. TOP RIGHT: Martin Haine is acceptable to both the SS veterans and the NF's new leadership. BOTTOM LEFT AND MIDDLE: NF political soldiers ripping off the taxpayer. NF chief Graham Williamson writes rubbish to the Inland Revenue about the way the NF employs its top organisers. Phil Andrews defrauds the Department of Employment by working and drawing benefit at the same time. BOTTOM RIGHT: Holland, the Jew hater, buys Israeli made cassette tapes. An oversight or a little help to his Middle East contacts?

Andrews is a particularly nasty piece of garbage, a drunken thug who served a term of imprisonment for beating up a policeman. Although still young he has a lot of clout in the NF and when he is not ripping off the Department of Social Security by making false claims, he is on his travels to Europe and Malta. The latter trip was kept very hush hush, possibly because of the island's strong Libyan links.

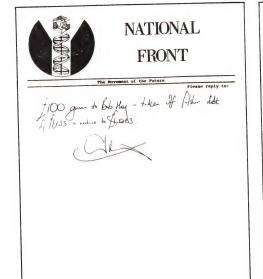

Andrews has worked at the freight terminal at London's Heathrow airport. A number of us were worried about the real reasons behind this build up of special members in key jobs, such as banks and transport facilities. Another thing we could never figure out was why Holland bought boxes of blank recording tapes made on a kibbutz in Israel — he is so fanatically anti-Jewish. In the end we thought he might have been doing a favour for some of his Middle Eastern friends.

As well as the NF chiefs' public and private approval of the NF's thug element, I found that they also sanctioned crimes of a non-violent nature, such as attempts at the last general election to cause trouble between legitimate parties without the NF appearing to be involved.

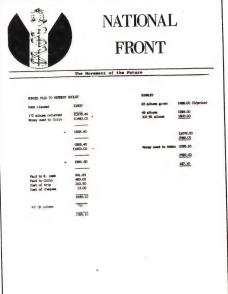

Another example of their contempt for the law was when they used the guise of a phoney animal welfare candidate to contest two local elections in Havering in 1988, and had to put together illegally a list of nominees for their man, as they had too little support in the area to do it legally.

Most of the NF's officials and organisers are working fulltime for the movement, and although the chiefs claim they are paying them no salaries, it is an open secret that large amounts of cash are placed at the disposal of these full-timers to cover their expenses. One can only speculate as to where the NF gets its money. I know on the technical side when appeals were made to the membership to finance the movement's high technology programme, most of the equipment had already been purchased, including sophisticated and expensive debugging devices for the movement's chiefs. When asked if such devices would be available to officers of lower rank, they laughed and said it was enough that they had published a series of internal documents to train them for the possibility of police surveillance or arrest. I think this was the first time I realised two things — the selfish attitude of the chiefs and, from the wording of the booklet on what to do if detained by the police, the fact that we are engaged in activities that will at some stage lead the police to arrest us for acts of terrorism.

It also did not take long for somebody in my position to notice the amount of self interest that is evident inside the NF. Graham Williamson, together with Michael Fishwick, who is based in Norwich, conducts the day to day running of the NF. Both men are unstinting in their service to the movement. Williamson lost a good job with a building

The The contents of this letter or the sole responsibility of the writer

	c 570
Howard Bindery Hevering Branch Loan	€ 970
	2 60
antition totale	£ 145
Phetocopy repair	f 700
2) Typesetter repair	€ 70
Telephone (E.Griffin)
3) Tool Hire	€ 87.11
Barns (other)	£ 100
Hancock	€ 1161
H W A	£ 271
p.Gobell	€ 280
R.Baggley	€ 750
6) Sterling Investments	€ 2,500
(5) Gandelf	€ 580
J.Field	£ 3,000
Bob Hoy	€ 140
Ulster	€ 70
(11) Derek's mother	€ 650
Vic Logan	€ 500
Fulsher	£ 1333
Bookshop credit	€ 2600
(1) VAT	€ 254
(3) Rent	2
(B) Ulster Information Service	£ 170
(7) British Telecom	€ 130.84
(9) Rates bill	£ 100.77
Patches	£ 3.84
(10) Gardners	£ 52.23
Dave Durant	€ 130
Martin Cross	€ 165
Pat's mother	120

ABOVE: The NF is awash with money. But is it all recorded for the tax man and where does it all come from?

Spray swastikas over every Tory poster that you can. In the longer term such actions will make the 'Nazi' smear against us ever more ineffective. On wall spray up the 5. slogan "Vote Tory ". Naturally do not identify the NF with this ina any way!

ABOVE: Williamson instructs members to conduct a campaign of criminal damage at election time. Note the dirty tricks game being organised by him.

BELOW: NF cadre manual prepares activists for arrest for acts of terrorism.

The Manager National Westminster Bank PtJ East Croydon Branch Wettern House 56 Dingwall Rd Choydon CR9 25N Your ret 536/056, 80/86 72.45 Norveniero 1967

Cash $105
Then you for your letter of the loth October 1987. I enclose the mandate as the you for your letter of the interpret of Electron I would like you to pay into the account in older to out it into creat. I would then like you to arrange for the transfer of this sociount to your branch at beautions $1, 352 a lings of London $43. Would you present this has been done and tell se if the account mannage will be the same or will be changed. hanking you is anthropation

Yours sincerely Patrick Harrington resquier

Harrington in charge of giving orders to the bank on the NF's behalf.

Ron Ferrett, East London activist greatly admired by political soldier Debbie Williamson.

If you are politically involved, they'll ask you to condemn or justify the actions of extremists in your Cause. Say mothing. If your young or only a rank and file activist they'll tell you that the leaders of your Cause are corrupt. "They get all the money, but keep themselves out of the firing line by using idealistic people like you as cannon-fodder". Then they'll plead with you to wake up and do yourself a favour. "For your own sake, let us help you get out of this mess". More tricks — stay silent.

The sole purpose of your arrest is to make you talk, so they'll use every trick in the book to get you to do so. The interrogation sessions may begin at 9.00 a.m. and go on with only two seal breaks until 11.30 p.m. The aim is to bully, frighten, anger or bore you into talking - don't let them win. Give your name and address, you don't have to tell them anything else. You should say nothing except for two simple sentances: "I am innocent. I know nothing about any crime or terrorist act, and I know no-one involved in any crime or terrorist act, and I know no-one involved in any crime or terrorist act.

6. Everyday items that would survive a search may also prove useful.

These could include such things as a bunch of keys on a chain (make sure that you cam explain what they are all used for if asked by the police), a can of baked beans or can or bottle of soft drink in a carrier bag. The list is endiess, just use your imagination.

Carry no unnecessary papers or other info which wight be seized.

BEGINN

I JOHN HEARD of 20, LOUISE STREET, BLACKPOOL hereby swear that I have borrowed the sum of Seven Hundred Pounds (700) off the Blackpool & Fylde National Front Building Fund.

That this money will be used to aquire a transit van, to be used on National Front business.

That I promise to pay as interest, 10% of the sum borrowed. This being Seventy Pounds (70).

That I promise to repay the Blackpool & Fylde National Front Building Fund the minimum sum of Fifteen Pounds (15) per week.

That this repayment will start from the first National Front Literature Run that the said transit van is used. Until such time that the sum borrowed, plus interest is paid in full.

Judlevel 5.7.87

John Heard.

Signed in the presence of Mr S G WILLIAMSON Trustee, Blackpool & Fylde National Front Building Fund. Mr P M SHEPHERD Trustee, Blackpool & Fylde National Front Building Fund.

Mr G K WILLIAMSON Member, Directorate, National Front.

ABOVE: Usury is rife inside the NF at top level.

Dear Paul, thanks for your letter of 28/1/88. I am pleased that you no longer have any contact with the factional imposters. You are most certainly very welcome to enrole as a NFN supporter. The next FOM bulletin will contain a few suggestions for 'cell' activities ie activities individuals can carry out who are not attached to active units. You may find these of use. If however you decide to distribute leaflets and/or papers please let me know as this is the basis for forming a unit and obviously we would like to offer assistance and advice. Would you please send your first payment form to me so that I can note my records. I look forward to hearing from you. yours sincerely Dave Gobell

National Rally. You are invited to a national rally to launch next years activities to be held on January 9th (a Saturday). Stewards will redirect from Victoria station London at the District and Circle Underground booking office between 10.30mm-12.00

Mr S R Allard C/o BCM Premier London WC1N 3XX Ricci Leatherwear 14 Laurie Walk Romford 9th December 1987 Dear sir.

I am writing with regard to leather jacket that I returned to your shop on 28/11/87. As I explained at the time, due to the jacket not being of merchantable quaility I would like either a replacement or my money returned (£99.95). I am quite prepared to hear the manufacturers opinion on the subject but I will not accept a mere repair. I realise that the onus is on the manufacturer and therefore acting on legal advice I send this letter in good faith. I trust the matter will be resolved amicably

Assistant Registrar
The London School of Economics & Political Science
Houghton St
London WC2A 2AE
17 December 1987

with reference to my telephone conversation of last week with a member of your staff, I am writing to confirm that I have applied to your university through UCCA to begin a course at

ABOVE: Extracts from letters from the NF's secret headquarters.

BELOW: Michael "Fishy" Fishwick writes to US nazi boss Gary Gallo.

Dear Gary,

Many thanks for your letter and publications that I gratefully received recently. I have seen New America and odd copies of The Nationalist before and was pleased to see that the high quality of presentation and the high standard of articles has been maintained. I assume that you regularly receive copies of National Front News and Nationalism Today (when it eventually appears). If not, let me know and I'll have them sent over to you. One of our problems at the moment is producing NT on a regular basis but this problem will be eliminated as soon as we've trained more staff for production purposes. I've had to learn paste up very quickly on a trial and error basis but hopefully the product is improving in presentation. Those of my time is taken up with NF news which doesn't allow me much time to help Derek out with NT. Derek should not have bothered with the actual production of NT but as I said earlier, when we have trained more staff Derek can concentrate more on more important matters. As you mentioned in your letter, hopefully this has been the last Anyway Gary, take care of yourself and I would be pleased to hear from you again if you've got the time to write. I would especially welcome any comments or criticisms that you might have about the last few issues of NF News. I have enclosed some just in case you haven't seen them yet.

Sest wishes, Michael Fishwick society and has found himself and his pretty young wife and two children under increasing financial strain.

He travels the country in his work to build up a sound day to day efficient organisation, and although his wife is a full cadre member, it is believed that her thoughts have strayed from her husband since the advent of a Hereward-the-Wakestyle figure on the Essex scene.

Williamson has looked out for the interests of his brother, Stuart, who runs the Blackpool and surrounding areas branch for the political soldiers. Other members have complained that this branch, well as it may be doing, gets priority above others. When key local activists wanted a van for the Front's operations in the area, Williamson rapidly organised a loan.

On the other hand, Fishy, as Fishwick is commonly known, is for ever complaining about the shortcomings of his fellow officers. With the departure of Nick Griffin from Suffolk to Wales he must be feeling increasingly isolated. At one time he clearly hoped that Joe Pearce would head in his direction when he left prison, well Joe did head that way when he moved in with former policeman Jim Capes at his Sprowston, Norwich home. But unfortunately Joe gave his allegiance to the Flag group.

Dear Graham,

Thanks for the cadre bulletin which arrived this morning. It's quite good, although the next one will need to carry a correction pointing out that committee membership does MOT guarantee Cadreship - get somewes to proofered in future.

Couldn't we have held the campaign meeting and Directorate meeting on the game weekends of doubt that I'll be able to get to both, in which case I will probably come to the Directorate meeting.

Enclosed please find the latest Cantalf bank statement (please return). The extra charges hadn't' shown up when you sent member to clear this up, so I'd appreciate a chaque made out to Quardalf Graphice made many to clear this up, so I'd appreciate a chaque made out to Quardalf Graphice are money to clear this up, so I'd appreciate a chaque made out to Quardalf Graphice are consumed to the control of the country of the country

ABOVE: A letter from NF chief Nick Griffin from his very up-market hideaway in the Wirral, sent before he moved to his safe house on a Welsh farm.

R. Fiore, Esq Meeting Point 26-40 Kensington High St London W8 21 November 1987 We enclose herewith a copy of the accounts for your approval. From information available, it appears likely that your share of profit for the year ended 31st October 1987 will be in the order of £22,000. Roberto Fiore & Partners, Meeting Point, 26-40 Kensington High St, Accommodation Agency Profit & Loss Account for the year ending 31st October 1986 55.650 Fees received Less overhead expenses : Rent & rates Telephone & postage
Printing, stationery & advertising
Secretarial services Accountancy Sundries 5,194 Net profit for the year 50,456 Share of profit : 20,182 Partners 50,456 Accountants' report have prepared the above profit and loss account from the records and informtion supplied to us. We have not carried out an audit.

ABOVE: Edwin Griffin obliges by doing terrorist Roberto Fiore's accounts for him.

Signed E V & J Griffin, accountants

BELOW: Massimo Morsello, Fiore's partner in crime and business. He was found guilty and received a ten year sentence for his terrorist activities in Italy. Now he is Fiore's partner in three London businesses.

Griffin's move in 1987 from his home base in Suffolk was kept very secret from the membership. Leaving his wife and child with relatives in Cheshire, he moved to mid-Wales and restored a farmhouse in one of the most remote areas of the country. He left behind a failed attempt to convert the outbuildings at his father's country property in Huntingfield into the first cadre training school. I remember going there and Nick proudly showing me the Celtic cross, the pagan symbol of the movement, that they had set in the brickwork of the floor of one of the buildings. In nearby Halesworth they had set up a printworks, at that time run by Tom Acton, under the names the East Suffolk Press and Gandolf Graphics. This whole set up fell apart following the joint efforts of the Guardian and Searchlight in exposing the fact that the NF were getting a government grant to develop the business.

ABOVE LEFT: Fiore's aptly named "Force 1" agency advertisement. ABOVE RIGHT: The NF as currency speculators; so much for usury. Bottom right: Nationalism Today issue 39 goes overboard for black ultra nationalism.

It was around that time that the NF's attempts to infiltrate. influence and disrupt all sorts of protest and fringe organisations were exposed. Their targets ranged from the National Council for Civil Liberties to animal welfare groups and support groups for striking miners. They also failed to get funds in the dying days of the Greater London Council after approaching its economic development body, hiding behind a number of community-based organisations.

Griffin's father Edwin was constantly finding new ways of assisting his son and his political allies. The family were paid for the work on the outbuildings, but he went on to offer his professional services as an accountant to his son's close friend and political associate, the Italian terrorist Roberto Fiore.

Fiore, together with his co-terrorist Massimo Morsello, and the help of a number of other on-the-run Italians, has mysteriously set up a series of agencies operating out of three London centres. Meeting Point has offices in Kensington High Street, Force 1 is sited in a newly refurbished block on Tottenham Court Road, and a third office for Spanish speaking clients is to be found in Vauxhall Bridge Road, Victoria. Between them they provide accommodation and employment for dozens of doubtful Italians and Spaniards who visit this country each year. Breaking the law appears to be a habit with Fiore and his friends, in Britain as well as in Italy. With total disregard for British laws governing employment, taxation and social security, they conduct the day to day business of their growing operations, which includes the supply of staff to well-known companies such as Macdonalds and Benetton, on a purely cash in hand basis. I have wondered so many times why the British authorities allow them to get away with this clear offence.

Agenda Strategy Conference

Day 1

The Organisation

Movement structure departmental positions Who or what are the responsibilities, who pays the bills (budgets and profit

How to turn Joe Public into a Directorate member.

December 12-13

General strategy.

To agree on general aims in 5 years and plan strategy targets for next year,

a) Printing and distribution
b) Financial security

c) Communication between members, units, departments

a) Memberships. FOMs, Cadres, NFNs, White Noise

b) Subscriptions
c) Distributist League. Rationalisation/advertising. Ombudsman Fundraising

Technology Fund

g) Investment h) Currency speculation

e) Cells

4) To be popular

a) Image, Propaganda activities b) Blacks, Guidance c) Areas of strength, Ulster, music, youth, inner cities, North

d) Community action

5) To make the opposition effective,

a) Splitting the ranks
b) Potential recruits
c) Intelligence
d) Security and infiltration

ABDUL WALI MUHAMNAD

NATION OF ISLAM

A PHOTO-ESSAY

Surrounded by members of the Vanguard of the women of the Nation of Islam, the Honourable Minister Farrakhan Muhammad speaks at the now famous International Saviours' Day 1988 address where Colonel Muammar Gadhafi spoke live via intercontinental satellite to the over 13,000 people present.

For an organisation that preaches against usury so vigorously, it came to me as a complete shock when I had access to a number of internal documents in which they discussed ways and means of becoming rich. These included property speculation by purchasing a villa in Spain and currency dealing, but what shocked me more than anything was the fact that when money was lent to branches for their own development, the party chiefs charged them at least 10 per cent interest. Clearly this was just another example of telling the members one thing and doing something else themselves.

Time and time again the question of where all this unexplained money was coming from would crop up, without any real answer from the leadership. People who were around at the time of the Italian takeover bid in the early 1980s told me that the Holland faction had been drip fed with funds by Fiore and his chums.

A year ago in the wake of Farrakhan's increasingly high profile among black Britons, it was decided to kill two birds with one stone. First we would continue to ingratiate ourselves with Colonel Gaddafi by showing support in Britain for his favourite American. At the same time we could follow the American example in trying to inspire ultra nationalist groups among ethnic minority communities to take a sectarian approach to politics in Britain.

The truth is that we did far better with our connections with Farrakhan and similar groups in the States than we have been able to do here. The chiefs were cock-a-hoop when they found a black Islamic convert, Michael Chambers, who was prepared to do business with them, including getting the NF to use its good offices with Farrakhan to import bulk orders of his paper, The Final Call, for Chambers and his friends to distribute. The NF probably saw this as an additional money-spinner on top of the fairly large amounts of money they were earning from the sales of Gaddafi's green book and the works of the Ayatollah Khomeini. These publications are being donated to the NF to sell as an indirect form of funding.

ABOVE: The new axis, the National Front, Gaddafi, Khomeini and Farrakhan. BeLow: Richard Chadfield and his Manchester NF branch revolt against the NF line on doing deals with black nationalists.

P.O. Box 6, Openshaw, Manchester, M11 6MT 18/12/87

Dear Graham,

All Manchester newspaper supporters have decided, at the meeting on 17/12/87, that they are not prepared to distribute issue number 99 of National Front News. The reason for this decision is because of the slogan "Fight Racism" which encircles a clenched black fist upon the front page. This is felt by all supporters to be particularly bad for the following reasons.

- a) People on the street do not distinguish between the words racism and racialism and such a slogan is likely to confuse those who might support us. The slogan will not impress either blacks or Communists who will reguard it as an pathetic joke or a cynical trick.
- b) The slogan being a Communist one is offensive to all supporters in Manchester.
- c) Supporters dislike Communist clenched fist salutes as much as they dislike National Socialist salutes. (perticularly when they are black fists —a not unimportant psychological point)

Accordingly it was agreed at the meeting that I should return this issue to you and request that you give us £23 credit towards future issues. I trust you will accept our decision.

Yours sincerely Richard Chadfield Dear Con

I enclose a paper - not as much anotation this time!

1) An anti-bloody Nazi editorial should have been in a long time ago. It should attack statism and explain this as Communism & fascism / nazism - all are collectivist this includes Strasser (he now must be totally distanced from us because the 'media' are still trying to link us).

2) Shocking front pages not on 'news' items. We should be making news not responding to it (on the front page that is!)

three weeks afterwards. Hancock should have it by Tuesdays so printed by Thursday.

- 4) I enclose articles/surveys in the Sun on racism it shows that blacks are more in favour of repatriation and separation than whites! A 'fact' you could use to shock the bigots etc. I wouldn't push the survey too much but its something.
- 5) Although there were some complaints that the paper wasn't ideological enough ie it didn't 'explain' what we stand for it was nevertheless well received & you did a fine job on the Tech fund. Keep the donations rolling!

ABOVE: Plans to damp down the NF's nazi image. Extracts from a letter from Nick Griffin. BELOW: NF chief writes to black Islamic convert in Leeds. Michael Chambers orders his bulk copies of Farrakhan's paper The Final Call via the NF.

Dear Mr Chambers,

I must apologise for not replying sooner but we are still waiting for our next batch of Final Calls. It seems that the papers take an eternity to cross the Atlantic! I enclose a personal copy which I have read. I am sure you will agree it makes interesting and thought provoking reading. As soon as I can get several copies I will forward them on to you. I assume you have been in contact with our local members. It is important that Seperatists/Third Positionists cooperate in the struggle to free our peoples. When I next visit Leeds I would be interested in meeting with yourself/your colleages.

yours sincerely Graham Williamson

The NF chiefs did not have it entirely their own way. The strong Manchester branch under the leadership of Richard Chadfield refused point blank to accept the new line of being friendly to blacks and threw out hundreds of copies of National Front News and thousands of pro-Farrakhan leaflets that were sent to them. Chadfield also had a lot of personal problems. He had been working for the Degussa chemical company in Manchester. This is the British arm of a major German group of the same name better known for making gas for the nazi extermination camps during World War Two. Even with this background they found little use for Chadfield's services and sacked him.

The NF targeted the London Borough of Hackney as a test bed for a number of its new policies. They decided to use the already fertile soil of black politics in the borough to sow the seeds of further dissent between the Labour council, the Jewish community and a small but very vocal group of black activists who support Gaddafi and Farrakhan. Not only were front pages and centre spreads in National Front News given over to heaping praise on the Islamic revival, but with each edition more obscure ultra nationalist groups came in for the Front's approval. These ranged from sections of the American Indian movement to Sikh separatists in India. Leaflets calling for apartheid style schooling in Hackney were also distributed.

To add to their efforts the NF decided to encourage the

CADRES / CANDIDATES

HAUKNEY NATIONAL HRONT

Defend Free Speech against State Repression.

J forgot to ask you on surlay get some back issues of NF news for us.

I would be very much oblighed if you could get 25 copies of issue 93 and 25 copies of the cold blooklied murder paper Leaturing Louis farrakhan, issue 84. These are requires that we are now getting.

Nours

ABOVE: Letter from Hackney NF branch to headquarters asking for copies of issues of NF News featuring pro-Farrakhan articles.

local 'direct action' and quasi anarchist movement to confront the Labour council by the political act of physically assaulting council workers and councillors. Technically the NF does not even have a branch in Hackney, but I know that Gary Russell, a young political soldier, was selected by the leadership to organise in the area with the support of Dave Durrant from Newham to back him up.

But the chiefs have been meeting with a local black activist in extreme secrecy for over a year now. His name is Patrick Carvalho. Harrington, Williamson and Mark Alder first met this man at a rehearsal for a pilot programme for a new TV chat show series. Whilst anti-fascists, members of the black and Jewish communities and many others called for a boycott of this programme, which also included nazis from Europe, Carvalho and a handful of black nationalist men and women went along. From that first meeting Carvalho went on to hold regular get-togethers with the Front leadership and was wined and dined by them.

Since the beginning of 1988 I have begun to wonder what the real motivation is for people like Harrington and Fiore. Despite the Front's denials that it is engaged in a programme that is anti-democratic and violent, all the evidence I and others have seen can only convince one that it is a serious threat to the country.

In the last twelve months at least four bombing campaigns have taken place in Britain. The smallest was the destruction

NATIONAL FRONT

The Movement of the Future

Mr Patrick Carvhallo

London N16

18th November 1987

Dear Patrick.

we do not seem to have much luck at catching you in at the Project but I will proposed by the Monday (and Tuesday if required). Patrick has been away for a few days so I have taken over the responsibility for arrangements. We were pleased to receive your positive letter as the potential for interracial(ist) cooperation has never been more promising or necessary. Myself and Patrick (and perhaps one other) would like to meet with yourself and two others for a drink or meal to discuss our next moves. We can agree on a time and venue over the phone.

Yours sincerely.

Graham Williamson pp. Executive Council •

National Democratic Front

P.O. Box 915, Washington Grove, Maryland 20880 (301) 670-0159

September , 1987

Dear Mr.

The National Front of Britain is now the leading National Revolutionary movement in Europe. I trained with the NF and maintain close ties with it. The Third Way ideology that the NF adopted beginning in 1983 was, in fact, largely drawn from the teachings of a young man named Roberto Fiore who has been living in exile in London since 1980. Flore's movement, which was called Third Position (Terze Posizione), was banned and destroyed in Italy in 1980. But many TP activists escaped the round up and spread their message across Europe such that there are Third Way movements in France, Spain, Portugal, Britain and now in America.

Sincerely

Gary Gallo Darector

One Race - One Nation - One Destiny

ABOVE LEFT: Letter from NF chiefs to Hackney black activist Patrick Carvalho after secret top level meetings with him. ABOVE RIGHT: Gary Gallo spells out his links with Roberto Fiore and the political soldiers when he stayed in Britain. BOTTOM RIGHT: After the television programme Disciples of Chaos is screened a re-assessment of the NF internal situation with particular reference to loyalty takes place at top level.

Loyalty

Not particular to the idea, nor to individuals or comrades. Group loyalty is such that an attack on one or more comrades is an attack on the group. Quite apart from morality, a group is only as strong as its weakest link and weakness in the face of an enemy reflects on the group and emboldens its challenge to the group's authority.

For instance, Ian Stuart makes constant attacks in his national socialist Blood & Honour upon White Noise but mainly upon individuals, Patrick Harrington, Derek Holland and Phil Andrews. He was unsure of his own strength and wished to divide the NF. We played along with this; the Croydon unit drank in the same pubs and did not argue but allowed him a crowd to lie and belittle us. It is prudent to fight and walk away. Others have shown too friendly an attitude. Most detest his politics but are not prepared to challenge his challenge to us. Consequently, he now feels bold enough to openly support the 'Flag' - mental defectives or homosexuals. We have to show solidarity.

Political Discipline

We expect members to pull together with the organisation, not tolerate parochialism such as the us and them attitude in Oldham, or individualism which works contrary to strategy. Phil Andrews has been involved in letters to our enemies which incites them and makes us look stupid. The BNP wish them to develop a dislike of the 'Flag', sending absurd even if humorous letters diverts that dislike. Another cadre is under threat of suspension for malicious gossiping. The days of the soft soap is coming to an end.

of a house built in the Essex green belt at Bayling outside Southend. It came within a week of the NF launching a campaign against such developments in the county. The second has been a series of bombs planted under police vehicles and letter bombs sent to senior police officers and members of local authority police committees in the West Midlands, which have steadily increased in sophistication. These are claimed by a non-existent organisation calling itself the Black Liberation Front. Even a number of senior police officers do not believe this is the work of blacks.

The third has been the increasing violence in the campaign against those engaged in animal experiments and shops alleged to sell furs and similar products. Again animal campaigners think the bombs are coming from outside their own ranks. The fourth bombing campaign, against English influence in Wales, has increased in ferocity and rapidity since the arrival of the National Front on the Welsh political scene twelve months ago. Both nationalist MPs and Welsh nationalist activists have pointed the finger at this terror campaign, which has now spread into London, as the work of the NF sheltering behind the names Sons of Glyndwr.

Individually any of these campaigns should worry the public. But in total they begin to take on the style of the Italian destabilisation campaigns carried out by the far right but orchestrated by anti-democratic forces in the security services.

Many of us inside the National Front have grown more incredulous during 1988 to the fact that although evidence of

MEIBION GLYNDWR - ER BUDD CYMRU

PLAID CYMRU, the Welsh 'Nationalist' party has at last shown clearly that it has been taken over by a repulsive mixture of Westminster toadies and neo-Marxist internationalists.

But a group of genuine Welsh nationalists have reacted to Plaid's total failure to stand up against the mass purchase of over 20,000 second homes by wealthy English buyers.

The purchase of second homes means that young Welsh people cannot afford to live in their own homeland and is hastening the closure of schools and shops hit with the resulting fall in population.

by the resulting fall in population.

This problem is now threatening the very existance of the Welsh culture and language one of the oldest and most beautiful in Europe.

MORTAL THREAT

Faced with this mortal threat to their nation, true nationalists in Wales have set up a shadowy organization known as Meibion Glyndwr - the Sons of Glyndwr - after the national hero and leader of the great Welsh revolt against the early English Empire.

In a desparate and dramatic campaign to make up for the total failure of their elected representatives', they have firebombed a total of over 130 holiday homes and estate agents who advertize heavily in the yuppie press.

The campaign has now lasted nine years and seems to be being stepped up, but the police have found little to go on and have complained about the lack of help from the Welsh people.

OUT OF TOUCH

This itself shows how much support Meibion Glyndwr have and shows how out of touch Plaid Cymru are in their reaction to the campaign

For the Welsh 'Nationalist' party, with its three smug overpaid Members of the Westminster parliament, has "unreservedly" condemned the attacks.

Plaid's President, Dafydd Ellis

Thomas has gone on absurdly to accuse the militants of being British State agents and has tried to smear them by alleging "connections with the extreme right and with extreme right wing nationalists".

He warned that people might be injured or killed in a campaign which has clearly striven to avoid such a thing. Then he went on to make a statement which more than anything else marks him out as a materialistic Establishment back and safety valve.

as a materialistic Establishment hack and safety valve.

"Destruction of property is the ultimate negative act", claimed this money-grubbing self-out. The Welsh nation is bleeding to death and he regards the destruction of bricks and mortar as the ultimate

CAP IN HAND

His solution is to go cap in hand to Westminster for more grants in order to bail out communities which are being murdered by the economics of the Capitalist system he supports. He also suggested that English immigrants should be encouraged to learn "something" of the Welsh language.

Cymru's leading nationalist poet, retired rector R.S. Thomas, was denounced by the Plaid stooges for expressing support for the Cymru militants and stating his view that even the death of an individual as a result would be "nothing compared to the death of Wales".

The Welsh press also leapt to attack the outspoken rector and sought to isolate Meibion Glyndwr by claiming that their attack on estate agents in Chester was, in the words of the Western Mail, "universally the NF's move towards terror as a political instrument grows daily, it has remained almost untouched by the state.

ABOVE: NF News openly praises a group claiming responsibility for the Welsh bombing campaign. RIGHT: A press cutting in early 1988 points the finger at the far right and others for the Welsh bombing campaign.

After the Channel 4 programme was shown in October 1988, there was a lot of recrimination inside the NF over the way Harrington had ruined the movement's image with his on-screen apology for the IRA and support for the Italian terrorists, and with the whole range of questions on which he got caught out, like our connection with Garry Gallo. One key member telephoned me and said he was convinced now that Harrington was working towards the absolute downfall of the NF, but he could not decide if it was on behalf of Searchlight or the state. The upshot is that another purge has been set in motion, security is being made even tighter and our membership will be down to around 500 by the start of 1989. Those few of us remaining in the higher echelons below the chiefs feel we are on a runaway train to personal and political disaster and cannot get off, but we wonder who is really running the railway.

Can it be that when a Welsh MP earlier this year claimed that the Welsh bombing campaign had been conducted by fascists with a section of the intelligence Services turning a blind eye, he had hit the nail on the head?

Thomas claims state with links additional in arson

By CLIVE BETTS, Welsh Affairs Correspondent

ARSONISTS INVOLVED in the holiday-home campaign may have been infiltrated by "British state officials", Plaid Cymru's president alleged at the weekend.

Dr Dafydd Elis Thomas also claimed that links exist between the firebombers and European right-wingers.

As rival conferences of nationalists disagreed about how to deal with English immigration and the resulting cottage arsons Dr Thomas said, "I am sure that the arsonists have connections with the European extreme Right and with extreme rightwing nationalists.

"It might be that there would be an element of infiltration from the State, as we had in the 60s and 70s."

Grave doubts

At the Llanrwst conference called by Plaid to find answers to the arson and immigration problems, party vice-chairman Mr Dafydd Iwan spoke of "strange" aspects to the arson campaign.

He asked why no cottage said to have been fitted with a police alarm had been attacked by arsonists. He said he had grave doubts about the whole arson campaign, but he was unwilling to spell them out in detail.

Asked whether he was alleging a dirty-tricks campaign, Mr Iwan replied, "It is never impossible."

Nationalists were split over whether immigration controls should be introduced.

Dr Thomas said, "Talk of controlling immigration is a dangerous fantasy."

But a rival conference in Aberystwyth of hard-liners, including some Plaid members. demanded such controls.

Mr Owain Williams, spokesman for the Aberystwyth meeting, said, "We want the same kind of controls which the Danes use to prevent Germans flooding into their country and buying it up."

North Wales police last night refused to comment.

FURTHER READING ABOUT THE INTERNATIONAL NAZI TERRORIST NETWORK

THE OTHER FACE OF TERROR

By Ray Hill with Andrew Bell Published by Grafton Books £3.50

and why not subscribe to Searchlight for up-to-date news on the enemies of democracy every month

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS  Names and addresses of subscribers to Searchlight are he provide a more efficient service. This information is not us required by the Data Protection Act 1984 to inform subscrib to information being held in this form.	ed for any other purpose. We are
Please make me a Subscriber to Searchlight.
Name/Organisation
Address
Donation £
Subscription Rates: Individuals £12 for 12 issues (inc p&p) Organisations £20 for 12 issues (inc p&p)	Europe: individuals £18 Europe: organisations £25 Outside Europe (airmail) £30
I enclose cheque/PO for £ made out to Searchlight.
I do not object to the above details being held on a computer.
Individual back numbers and complete sets are available on request.

Send £1 for a sample copy to Searchlight Publishing Ltd., 37B New Cavendish Street, London W1M 8JR.

